GOLD COUNTRIES DEFEATED IN VOTE ON BRITISH PROPOSAL

J. A. Crawford

BRITISH A.A.A. CHAMPIONSHIP

Cooper And Robertson Retain Titles.

BRITAIN'S THREE WINS

London, To-day.
Blazing sunshine favoured the opening day of the British Amateur Athletic Association meeting on the White City track yesterday when several minor events were decided.

A. A. Cooper, the holder, won the Two Miles Walk for Great Britain in 13 minutes 39.4/5 seconds, thus improving on his last year's time by 4.4/5 seconds.

Great Britain secured another win when Holden finished first in the Six Miles, covering the distance in 30 mins. 32.1/5 secs. This time was 9 secs. slower than J. H. Potts' time last year.

D. McNab Robertson, the Scottish holder, retained his title in the Marathon, covering the distance in 2 hours 43 mins. 41 secs. slower than his last year's time.

The only foreign triumph of the day was recorded by Blankers (Holland), who won the Hop Step and Jump with a distance of 48 ft. 2 1/2 ins.—2 ft. 10 1/2 inches better than A. J. Gray's effort last year.—Reuter.

MR. F. H. HOLDMAN'S DEATH.

Post Office Officials.

Mr. Frederick Herbert Holdman, Assistant Superintendent of Mails at the Post Office, passed away at 2.50 a.m. this morning at the Kowloon Hospital from cerebral haemorrhage.

The late Mr. Holdman came to Hong Kong with the Wiltshire Regiment, and joined the Post Office in 1922. The deceased is survived by his wife, who resides at 307 Prince Edward Road, Kowloon.

The funeral takes place this afternoon, passing the Monument, Happy Valley, at 5.30 p.m.

TREASURY BILLS ISSUE OVERSUBSCRIBED

London, To-day.
The amount applied for in yesterday's Treasury bills issue at three months, was $28,390,000 and the amount allotted was $42,000,000.

The average rate per cent. was 10.485d, as compared with 8/9.55d last week.—British Wireless Service.

The appointment of the Hon. Mr. Richard McNeill Henderson to be an Official Member of the Executive Council and an Official Member of the Legislative Council, with effect from July 2, 1932, is announced in the Government Gazette.

CRAWFORD CHAMPION

ELLSWORTH VINES BEATEN IN SECOND SET

Stirring Struggle For 45 Minutes.

JAPANESE-GERMAN MEN'S DOUBLES FINAL

Boretra And Betty Out

London, To-day.

Jack Crawford, the 25-year-old Australian Davis Cup captain, completed a brilliant "double" yesterday when he defeated Ellsworth Vines, the holder, after a gruelling five-set struggle to win the Men's Singles Championship at Wimbledon yesterday.

Crawford won the French Championship from Henri Cochet at Auteuil before he invaded Wimbledon. He is the first Britisher to win the All-England Championship since Gerald Patterson, the giant Australian won the title in 1920.

Crawford really won his match against Vines in the second set when he mastered the American's fiercest cannon-ball services and powerful drives. The set lasted for three-quarters of an hour, the games going with the service, until Crawford broke through in the twentieth game to level the match.

The final set was a repetition of the second until Crawford took a love game off Vines' service to follow it up by winning his service to give him the set and title at 6-4.

The crowd rose to a man as Crawford made the winning stroke, and the excited gallery cheered for fully three minutes.

Last year Vines, making his first appearance in England, beat Crawford in straight sets in the semi-final to go on to beat Bunny Austin by the same margin in the Final. During the winter he toured Australia with the American "Test" team and suffered defeats at the hands of both Crawford and McGrath.

Crawford now holds three of the world's four major tennis titles. He is holder of the Wimbledon, French, and Australian Championships. Vines holds the American title.

MARSHAL CHANG HSUEH-LIANG HAS AUDIENCE WITH POPE

Mr. T. V. Soong Due To Arrive In Rome To-day.

Rome, To-day.
His Holiness the Pope yesterday granted an audience to Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, at the Vatican.
The Chinese Finance Minister, Mr. T. V. Soong, is due in Rome to-day. Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang will not return to China with Mr. Soong.—Reuter.

INDUSTRIAL COLLAPSE FEARS IN U.S.

Speculation Outstrips Normal Advance.

WORKERS NOT YET BACK AT A LIVING WAGE

Washington, To-day.

Anxiety that the recent surge of speculative production in United States factories and that the rise in prices of commodities will outstrip the purchasing power of the masses and will cause a new and worse collapse, was yesterday expressed by Brigadier-General Johnson, administrator of the National Recovery Act.

He appealed to industries to hasten the formulation of codes for increasing wages and reducing hours of work.

This tendency was borne out by the report of the American Federation of Labour, showing that workers' incomes had increased 7 per cent. between March and May, while the factory output had jumped 35 per cent.

The report infers that much of the present feverish activity and speculative urges in industry will voluntarily limit its profits until the workers are back to work at a living wage.—Reuter.

RUBBER INDUSTRY NOT DOOMED.

Career For Adventurous And Skilled Britons.

London, To-day.
"Rubber is not doomed to dissolve into an industry of small luncheon holdings," said the Earl of Plymouth, Under-Secretary for the Colonies, in a speech at the luncheon of the Incorporated Society of Planters of Malaya yesterday.

"It was far from being a career of the past for skilled and adventurous Britons."

There were small but definite signs of improvement in the rubber industry, he added, and the world will require large quantities of rubber for the new uses that will require large quantities of rubber for the new uses that will be constantly found.—Reuter.

LONDON MARKETS CONFIDENT

London, To-day.
A confident tone characterised the markets on the London Stock Exchange yesterday. Industrial issues rising sharply.

DISPLAY OF SORENESS

CONFERENCE TO ADHERE TO MAIN AGENDA

French Opposition Overruled.

CRITICAL VOTE RESULTS 25 TO 15

London, To-day.

Consideration of the items which can usefully be discussed, having regard to the fact that the gold bloc countries have objected to anything relating to monetary questions, occupied the attention of the sub-committees of the World Economic Conference, yesterday, when they resumed activities yesterday.

The gold bloc countries displayed soreness at the apparent attempt to narrow down this line of deliberation.

The British Chancellor of the Exchequer Mr. Neville Chamberlain, proposed at one meeting that the original agenda be adhered to, but reservations could be made if unanimous conclusions were impossible. The leader of the French delegation, M. Bonnet, championing the gold nations, opposed the proposal, which was ultimately carried by 25 votes to 15.—Reuter.

DETAILED REPORT OF PROCEEDINGS

London, To-day.
At the meeting of the Monetary Sub-Committee of the World Economic Conference, which has before it an agenda including credit policy, price levels, limitation of currency, fluctuations, exchange controls, problems of indebtedness and the resumption of lending the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, emphasised the difficulty of isolating particular items for discussion without raising others, and he proposed that all should be subject to further discussion.

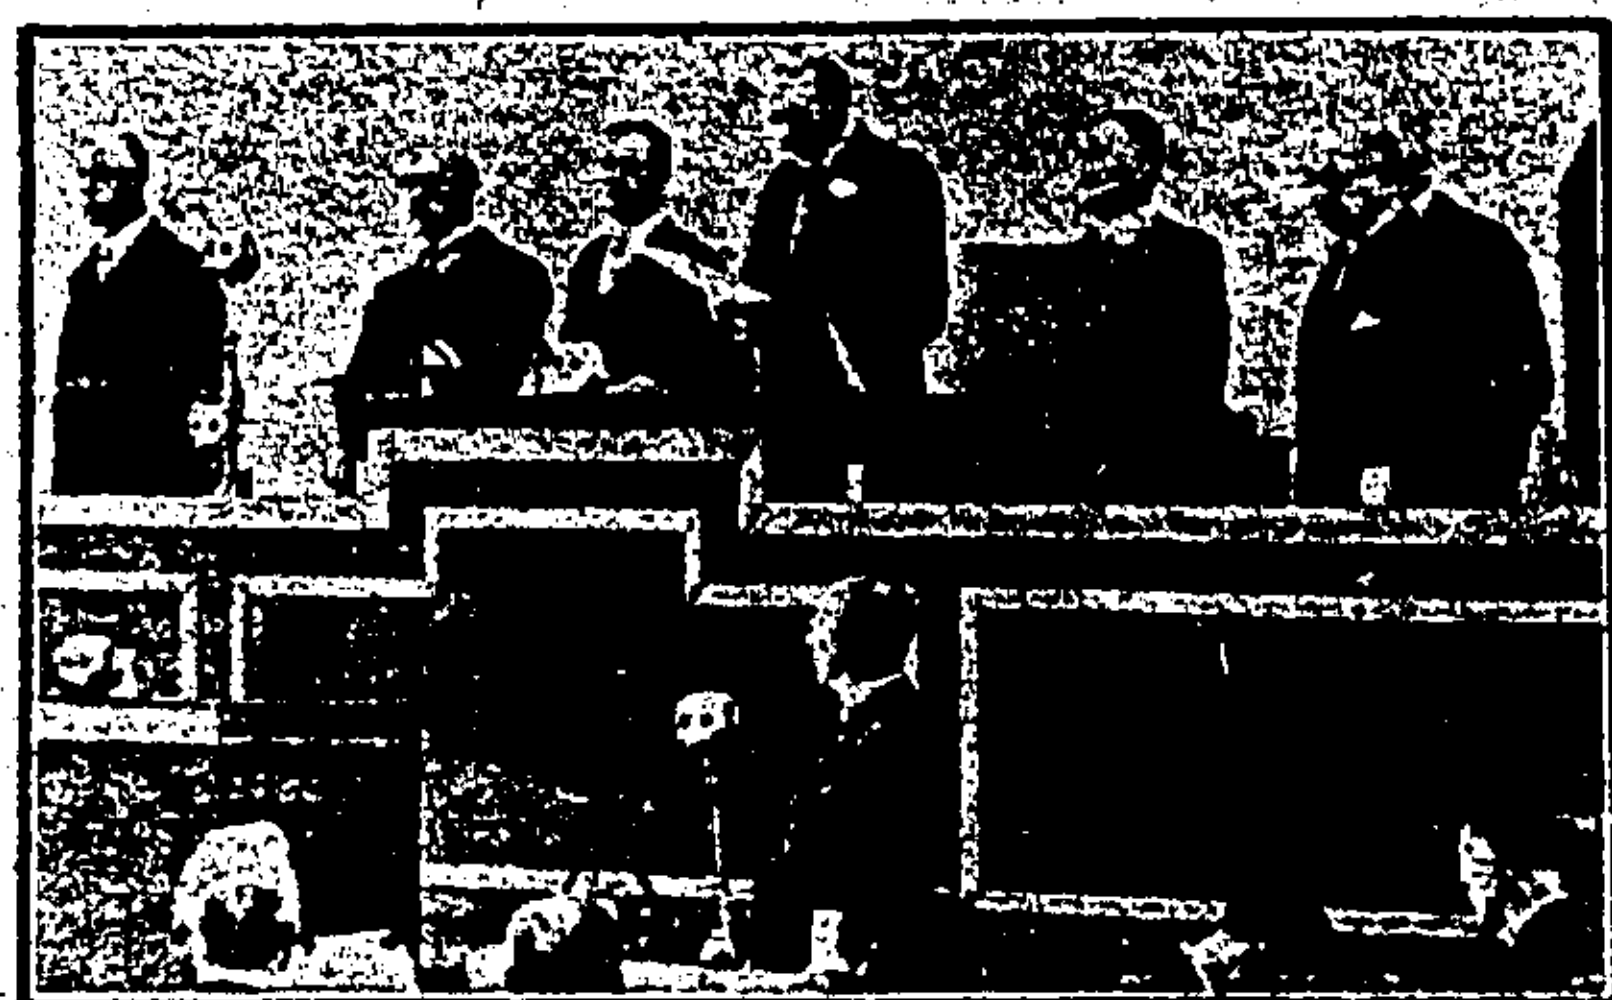

The Roumanian delegate proposed, and M. Bonnet, of France, supported, that the work of the Committee should cease on questions other than indebtedness.

This question might be profitably discussed while on other side of the Conference the work on questions of conditions of production and marketing and organisation of labour might be proceeded with.

Senator Y. Couzens, of the United States, while recognising that there were differences of opinion as to how best to accomplish the primary purpose of the Conference to relieve unemployment, drew attention to President Roosevelt's endeavours to raise price levels, and hoped that other countries, each in its own way, would assist. He saw no reason for not continuing with the work before the Committee.

Sir Henry Strachey, of India, submitted that the exclusion of monetary questions from consideration would conflict with the British conclusion to proceed.

SOVIET'S C.E.R. DEMANDS

250,000,000 Roubles Redemption.

FAVOURER NATION TREATMENT

Moscow, To-day.

The memorandum of the Soviet delegation to Tokyo regarding the main principles of the redemption of the Chinese Eastern Railway, by Manchukuo, read by M. Youremiev, head of the delegation, at the conference of July 3, has been published. It estimates that the expenditure on the railway up to 1931, totalled 411,000,000 roubles, but agrees to redemption at a cost of 250,000,000 gold roubles, half of which the Soviet agrees to receive in goods.

The memorandum stipulates guarantees regarding freedom of transit on the Chinese Eastern Railway for Soviet freights and passengers at advantageous terms.

The Ussurian Railway is to be guaranteed a definite quantity of freights arriving on the Chinese Eastern Railway, and Soviet goods are to receive the most favoured nation treatment.

The interests of Soviet citizens and Soviet employees of the railway are to be guaranteed.

NEW ANGLO-SOVIET TRADE PACT.

Negotiations In London On Monday.

London, To-day.
Negotiations for the new Anglo-Soviet trade agreement will resume on Monday.

The old agreement expired in April, a few days before the embargo on Soviet goods in Britain was imposed as the result of the imprisonment of two British employees of Metropolitan Vickers. The embargo was lifted on Sunday last, following the release of the two prisoners.

IRISH TARIFFS ON BRITISH GOODS.

Emergency Duties To Be Permanent.

Dublin, To-day.

An Irish Free State Government Bill issued yesterday empowers the Government to make permanent emergency duties imposed in connection with the economic war against Britain, including the tariff on wearing apparel, up to 60 per cent. on coal, five shillings per ton and on cement, electrical machinery and articles mainly of steel and iron, 20 per cent.—Reuter.

MANCHUKUO SHIP RAIDED BY RUSSIANS

Soviet Frontier Guards Confiscate Cargo.

STRONG REPRISALS EXPECTED

Harbin, To-day.

Ten Russian emigrants en route to Manchukuo and a number on guards were taken from the Manchukuo steamer, "Tung Sang" by Soviet frontier guards while the vessel was in Manchukuo waters yesterday. The cargo of the vessel was also confiscated.

Members of the Manchukuo Government are of the opinion that when the report is confirmed, Manchukuo will take the strongest measures to recover both the prisoners and the cargo.

A report received in official circles last night states that a body of frontier guards boarded the vessel in the Ussuri River, in the vicinity of Hulin.

After conducting a thorough search of the ship, the cargo was piled into waiting boats and taken together with the prisoners, into Soviet territory.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

HEAVY TRADING ON WALL ST.

Silver Sales Absorbed.

New York, To-day.

Continued heavy commission house liquidation offers of silver were well taken by arbitrage and foreign accounts, on the New York Market yesterday.

General issues again showed an upward trend, and 6,970,000 shares were traded. The great volume of business was undoubtedly caused by traders taking profits on the theory that the climax of the market was at hand. Later action proved that there were no grounds for the supposition.—Reuter.

U.S. DOLLAR AT 474.

Sensational Slump Yesterday.

The American dollar slumped sensationally yesterday, when the London on New York cross-rate was quoted at $44.74, an advance of 27 points on Thursday's quotation. The New York on London rate was given at $44.70 as against $44.57 on Thursday.

GOLF REPLAY TODAY

2 AMERICANS TIED AT 292 IN BRITISH OPEN

Thrilling Contest In Difficult Wind.

BRITISHER FAILS AT 35TH HOLE

Leaders Crack Up

St. Andrew's, To-day.

The most thrilling British Open Golf Championship for many years must go once again to America. Yesterday Craig Wood and Denmore Shute, both Ryder cup players, tied for the first place with an aggregate score of 292 for the 72 holes. They will play off over 36 holes to-day.

An increasing wind making the stiffest breeze made the final round the most difficult and resulted in the leaders cracking.

It seemed at one time very likely that the trophy would go to Britain for the first time in ten years when Syd Easterbrook, the British Ryder Cup player, was out in 37 in the final round.

Requiring a 38 to win, disaster overtook the Kent player at the fourteenth, which is par five.

Easterbrook took a seven and needed a three at the final hole to tie. He, however, pulled his second shot to the Club-house steps and did not have any chance, though he holed a four yarder for the par four to finish second, equal with the holder, Gene Sarazen, and Leo Diegel, two other American Ryder Cup players.

Denmore Shute owed his tie to brilliant play in the final round when he shot a 73, which was equalled by Archie Compston and beaten only by Olin Dutra and R. Whitcombe, who were round in 72.

So severe had the course become that Walter Hagen, the leader in the first two rounds, cracked up completely. He took 82 for an aggregate of 301.

Cyril Tolley and W. McLean, the Scottish champion, were the leading amateurs, tying for seventh place with 298.—Reuter.

The WOMAN'S Page

Latest Tones And Tints

Deep-Sea-Blue, Eel-Grey, Wheat-Yellow.

It was a woman designer who first bestowed interesting names upon tones and tints in materials, as well as upon the creations which she fashioned from them.

The dress world took up the idea with enthusiasm, and every blue, and grey, and red now has its own attractive and descriptive name.

Grey, which promises to rule the sartorial roost for many months to come, has given those who invent titles for the new colours a very interesting time lately.

For a soft tone, lighter than "battleship" which is particularly suitable for little coats and skirts, they have hit upon the name "eel grey"—and the woman who likes a hat of distinctive shade will be glad to know that she can wear with this soft grey headgear of red purple, black, or even white.

Lavender Tones.

One authority on dress nazards the notion that the craze for chromium in dress accessories is largely responsible for the popularity of grey among the fashion experts.

Be that as it may, there are the loveliest tones of it available, and if pure grey is considered too cold there is a range of shade with a hint of lavender—most becoming of tints—in them, and several examples of "cloud grey," which, as might be expected, has a slight hint of blue in it.

This is a tone which, is to be used largely for evening frocks, and, expressed in tulle, is particularly lovely.

Blue and white is proving a favourite combination. What is known to the dressmakers as "light navy" is being chosen for coats and skirts, white for jumpers to be worn with navy skirts there is "deep-sea blue," and this is usually finished with a touch of white about the collar, Berets and scarves to match it are being knitted by the girl who likes to be right-up-to-the-minute in regard to colours.

Chinese Red.

Red seems to have returned to stay. Every tone of it is seen, but probably the favourites—which are quite new—are Shanghai red, and Pomegranate red. The former suggests the Chinese genius for using this colour in tones that, though rich, are never garish. It has something of the temperament of a Chinese lacquer red, and is softer and much more becoming than the sealing wax red which was inflicted upon us last year. The Pomegranate red is being offered to us in two tones—the one closely resembling the ripe, the other the unripe, fruit in shade. Touches of these two reds are being introduced with various shades of mauve and yellow.

"Wheat-yellow" is only another name for our old friend, Maize, and is as suitable as any yellow for blonde and brunette alike. It has nothing of the harshness that makes yellow so difficult, as a rule, for day-time wear.

THE UNVARNISHED MODE.

White Organdie Is Clever Contrast.

(By The Hon. Mrs. C. W. Forester)

We cannot always be "shining" or "sparkling," even in the evening. For day wear, especially as summer advances, georgette, tulle, lace, heavily varnished are apt to make us feel as if our clothes might melt in a hot sun!

Lacquered-satin, especially black or very dark tones, is attractive, providing it is worn by a slim woman. The contrast of dull white organdie is clever, though when it comes to a question of a thick white satin the fabric should retain its lustre.

Pale blue, the new favourite evening colour, should never be varnished. In fact, satin-cire is only good for black or perhaps the darkest greens and reds.

As for lace (again black excepted), a shiny surface is not an improvement. I have seen an expensive evening model in a red-brown lace-cire, with raised design, and it resembled leather-work, and was hideous and heavy. Satin is the fabric that lends itself best to the lacquered treatment, and so advantage may be taken of the season's craze to have that one stand-by in the wardrobe—a frock of soft and thick black satin-cire. This wears wonderfully well, and can be much improved by the addition of a velvet and fur wrap.

Black wool and white organdie comprised one of the smartest of day gowns, to which a long half-length coat of organdie or varnished white crochet lace was added.

TREATMENT FOR THE HAIR.

Preparation For Fair Types.

The following is a preparation which has been much used by women of the fair haired type, and it is intended to keep the hair from darkening, and to give it a fine golden sheen.

A teaspoonful of cream of tartar should be added to the juice of two lemons, and a coffee cupful of camomile tea made from the dried flowers. Add a little water, heat, and apply it all over the head with a small soft brush. Allow it to dry in the open air if possible, and shampoo after an hour or so.

For Grey Hair.

Make a lotion from half an ounce of spirits of rosemary, a quarter of an ounce of bay rum, two drams of castor oil, and two ounces of almond oil. Mix the ingredients well and apply to the roots of the hair with a fine sponge three times a week.

For Dark Hair.

Three ounces of rosewater, five drops of oil of rosemary, three drops of oil of verbena, and half an ounce each of tincture of quilla and rectified spirits of wine.

Mix thoroughly together and apply with a hairbrush. The lotion will add to the charm of dark hair with bluish or greenish tones in it.

YOUTHFUL MODES FOR SUMMER.

New Classic Sport Suits.

Expressing youth seems to be the main objective of the designers of the summer silhouette, whether they be French or American. Let us consider for a moment the new lines as we see them coming through fashion lanes.

For daytime we have the classic tailored suit based on what are termed mannish styles, in reality no more than straightforward, well cut and fitted models. The new classic sport suit is more informally easy and has that comfortable, wearable look that every woman likes.

Then there is the dressmaker suit, with greater attention paid to detail. It is somewhat more complicated as to cut, and a bit more dressy and feminine.

SCANTY UNDIES

Scantiness is a byword in the underwear mode, for foundation garments are not living up to their duty if they reveal their presence by so much as a wrinkle. The latest in panties are wee things, not calculated to come much lower than the bottom edge of a girdle (a mode that must have had its rise behind the footlights!)

SKIRT WITH OPENING IN CENTRE

Matched With High Waisted Capelet.

WITH FLOATING FRONT OPENINGS.

There is the slim black apron-coat-dress, too, which appears like a skirt with a straight opening down the centre front over a red and white checked silk frock. A high-waisted flat capelet conforms in black, and a split up the centre back is surmounted by a bow-tie at the nape with short streamers repeating the red and white checked fabric of the frock worn underneath. Red cape sleeved semi-fitted coats with floating front openings also look effective over red and white checked silk fabric. Small checks are smarter for the morning than a go-between-hour model in floral, spotted and stiple striped Chines, or the broad tartan plaid chiffons favoured for afternoon wear.

Wildflower patterned Chines with tiny multi-coloured flowers on a black ground look important under light wool coats—tulle green being one example though any colour from the wildflower group will carry out the effect.

THE USEFUL BROOCH

Brooches, which used to be worn simply for decoration, now have a special use on a dress. Three or four are being worn on one dress, each carefully placed to hold a scarf in place, set the neckline, or trim the short sleeveband.

FUR COAT CARE

Women who wear coats with high fur collars should have the special hangers with the hook eight inches long.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN,"—KING'S THEATRE.

"The Painted Woman," the current attraction at the King's Theatre, is a colourful South seas romance of two strong men's rivalry for the affection of a girl in the Far East ports. Spencer Tracy, Peggy Shannon and William Boyd are featured in the leading roles. William Boyd is seen as a hard-boiled captain of a trading schooner, who shelters Peggy Shannon from the Police. He puts her ashore on an island nearby to await his return, where she meets an adventurous and reckless pearl-fisher, in the person of Spencer Tracy. They fall in love, and the complication arises when Boyd returns. The climax is a thrilling one, and includes an attempt of escape in an aeroplane which is wrecked.

"70,000 WITNESSES,"—QUEEN'S THEATRE.

Phillips Holmes, Dorothy Jordan, Charlie Ruggles and Johnny Mack Brown head the cast of "70,000 Witnesses," a murder mystery set on the football gridiron, now showing at the Queen's Theatre. The story has to do with the attempt of a gambling ring to "fix" a big football game by eliminating the star player of the favourite team. They fix it so well that the star, breaking loose and en route to a touchdown in a clear field, is suddenly seen to stagger, stumble and fall. Physicians find him dead, with not a mark on his body to explain how he was killed—through they know it is murder. The boy's teammate and buddy and a clever detective finally solve the case, however.

"THE LADY WITH A PAST,"—CENTRAL THEATRE.

Constance Bennett, the beautiful blonde actress, takes the leading role in "The Lady With A Past," now showing at the Central Theatre. The picture gives an intimate glimpse into the night life of New York and Paris, and shows Constance Bennett as a popular member of New York's younger set. She is the centre of attraction wherever she goes, and her reception at the lavishing parties, at historic chateaux on the Riviera, are among the features of the film. David Manners and Ben Lyon play opposite Miss Bennett, with Merna Kennedy, Albert Conti and Don Alvarado in the supporting cast.

"A PASSPORT TO HELL,"—ORIENTAL THEATRE.

"A Passport to Hell," now showing at the Oriental Theatre, brings the Empress of emotion, Elissa Landi, in an eternal triangle story of life in East Africa, where our heroine, a misunderstood woman, marries a German officer in order to avoid internment during the war. She falls in love with her best friend, and her father-in-law does all he can to ruin her. The cast includes Paul Lukas, Alexander Kirkland and Warner Oland.

BRIDGE NOTES
Missing The Boat.
(By "HORATIUS")

Quite a discussion arose recently in the cardroom which I frequent, as to what should have been called by partners holding the following hands:—
Dealer: S—A K J 9 7 6.
H—Q 7.
D—A K J.
C—K 3.
Responder: S—Q 8 5 4 3.
H—A K J 4.
D—9 5.
C—A 7.

The side was vulnerable and had a part score of sixty. What actually happened was that the declarer called two Spades and responder made it three, where the bidding stopped. The declarer afterwards said that with support from his partner he should have gone on to a slam. I, one of the opponents, disagreed. In the first place, there was not a Forcing-Two bid to open with but having regard to the strength, there was not a lot of fault in calling a bid which was pre-emptive and may have shut out any bid the enemy may have had in Clubs. But since a Forcing-Two was called, the bid of three Spades was a bad response. It was, in fact, almost a minimum and did not give any idea of the real strength of the hand. It might have meant merely that the hand held Spades support and nothing else. The proper response should have been a jump overbid. Four Spades would have been better. To my mind, the proper bidding of these hands would have been:—
Declarer Responder.
One Spade Three Hearts (A)
(B) Four Diamonds. Six Spades (C)
(A) A forcing take out which demanded a response. Responder had to do this in order to keep the bidding open so that he could have gone back to Spades. Two Hearts might have been left in.
(B) Showing strength in an outside suit.
(C) There is no need to beat about the bush any more. With such strong Spades support and the undeclared Ace of Clubs, a small Slam is not an unduly risky bid to make, through this important card

At the same sitting, I was greatly provoked by a partner who has never learned that there is no such thing as a "rescue from weakness" at Contract. I held seven Hearts to the K.J., the Ace of Spades bare and not much else. Against a rubber bid of two No Trumps I went to three Hearts and was overbid on my left with three No Trumps. My partner then decided to say something and he mentioned Four Spades because, as he afterwards declared, he had a singleton Heart. Sensing utter and expensive defeat, I went to Five Hearts and we were three down for a loss of a thousand points. At Four Spades we should have been six down for a loss of 2,200.

When the dummy went down, I was horrified to discover that he had made a rescue bid of Four Spades with a Yarborough except for the ten of Spades which was the top of six in the suit.

"NAGANA"—MAJESTIC THEATRE.

"Nagana," the African drama, which marks the debut of Tala Birell, exotic Viennese actress, is now showing at the Majestic Theatre. The film gets its name from the African word for the dread sleeping sickness, and the story is concerned with the fight of a doctor against the disease in a native village in the wilds. Melvyn Douglas and Tala Birell are well cast, but the plot is weak. Fine scenes of wild animals in the big drawing card.

MAIL REVIEW
"CHANCES"—STAR THEATRE.

"Chances" which is now showing at the Star Theatre is a film which in every respect merits the highest praise. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who takes the leading role is seen as a British Artillery officer in the Great War, who is in love with the same woman as his brother. "Doug" carries it off with perfection. The grandeur of the battle scenes offer a most dramatic contrast. Never before on the screen has heavy artillery action in the war been presented so graphically.

POP — Honesty Does So Simplify A Thing.

LABOUR'S POLICY IN THE MELTING-POT.

Socialism Unlikely In Britain.

MR. COLE'S FRANK OPINIONS

Mr. G. D. H. Cole, whose political and economic views are of great weight in the Labour Party, contributes an interesting article in "Current History," of New York, in which he frankly sums up his view of the present situation.

"Labour's policy is still in the melting-pot and its leadership is still torn between the desire to re-establish the old policy of gradualism with only a moderate shift in the direction of more active Socialist measures, and the feeling that gradualism is no longer workable in face of the deepening depression in world capitalism.

"It is easy enough to show that British Labour, even if it gained an independent majority of its own—which it is by no means yet within sight of doing—would have the greatest difficulty in establishing Socialism by constitutional means, not only because it would have to encounter the determined opposition of the House of Lords and probably of the Crown, but also because its majority would almost certainly be composed of heterogeneous elements, not all of whom would be anxious for a complete and immediate Socialist programme.

"It is also not difficult to show that a resumption of the old tactics whereby the Labour party tried to edge the British economic system toward Socialism without any frontal attack upon capitalism—such as might cause dangerous economic dislocation and at any rate a temporary fall in the standard of life—is very difficult to carry into effect because there are narrow limits to the extent to which capitalism can be taxed without taxation reacting on the efficiency of capitalist industry in world competition.

"Accordingly, despite the obvious difficulties in the way of winning over a majority of the British electorate to a positive Socialist programme, or, even so, of putting such a programme into operation by constitutional means, there is at present a pronounced drive among the rank and file of the Labour Party towards the Left. The Labour Party Conference of 1932 adopted, much to the annoyance of many of its leaders, a set of resolutions which pledged the next Labour Government to an attempt to carry a constructive Socialist programme immediately into effect.

"Wide Support Needed. The practicability of such a policy clearly depends on the prospect of securing for it the support not only of the main body of the industrial workers but also of large elements drawn from the professional, technical and administrative classes....

"Doubtless most of these people would rally more readily to the support of capitalist planning than to planning along Socialist lines—but there is no indication of the willingness of British capitalism to adopt a planned economy. Many individuals are at least sympathetic to Socialism, and are deterred from becoming Socialists less by the fear of violent revolution—for Communism is almost as insignificant as Fascism in Great Britain—than by a doubt whether the Socialists mean business or possess the will and competence to carry a policy of planned socialisation into effect.

"There is, indeed, no more likelihood of Socialism coming to Great Britain in the near future than there is of it coming to France. It is clear that Socialism will not come either by the mere continuation of the gradualist tactics of past Labour Governments or by the rise of a party attempting to achieve it along Communist lines."

Mr. Cole concludes by asserting that while the chance of the British Labour Party "is not yet lost... the reaction against Socialism on the Continent has made its task a great deal harder than it might have been."

SMUGGLERS POSE AS TREES.

New Ruse To Evade Customs Officers.

Cologne.

Smugglers camouflaged as pine trees are the latest problem confronting the already harassed customs officers in the western frontier districts.

Some officers the other day surprised a party of smugglers on the borders of a pine forest at Roetgen, near Aix-la-Chapelle. They gave chase, but in an instant the smugglers had one and all disappeared.

It was only after the customs officers had carefully combed the forest for a long time that they found their quarry had become merged in the pine trees. Their backs and packs of smuggled goods were carefully camouflaged with pine bark and branches. All they had to do when chased was to make for the nearest pine tree and stand against them.

The captured smugglers were relieved of their camouflaged 10,000 cigarettes and 50 lbs. of coffee.

AFRICAN DESERT TRAGEDY.

130 Die Of Thirst In Italian Transjuba.

MOVING TRIBE TRAPPED.

Nairobi.

One hundred and thirty men, women and children have died from thirst in the desert areas of Italian Transjuba.

The victims of this terrible tragedy are natives who had decided to leave their homes in Italian Somaliland to return to the British flag under which they had formerly lived.

It appears that a section of the Somalis, living in the Kismayu area of Italian Somaliland, who before the war were British subjects, decided to settle in the northern frontier district of Kenya.

A large number left with their families and cattle, travelling across the country in the direction of the Tana River.

Some of them reached British territory, where they reported that, while crossing Italian country, the party had divided.

A search party for the remainder was immediately organised and eventually some survivors were found. They were in a state of collapse but were able to relate the tragic fate of their companions, 130 of whom had succumbed after the party had lost its way in the desert and run out of water.—Reuter.

HIGH HONOUR FOR WOMAN.

Lord Marcher Of Kemes Barony.

London.

For only the third time in nearly 1,000 years, a woman has become Lord Marcher of the Barony of Kemes in Pembrokeshire. The office was created in the time of William the Conqueror.

The Lord Marcher then was required to ride at the head of an armed force to protect the English counties from the hordes of Wales.

One of the privileges of the office is the maintenance of a bodyguard of homagers equipped with halberds.

Mrs. Nesta Withington of Bleicester, Oxford, has just succeeded as the 26th holder of the Lord Marcher's office on the death of her father, Sir Martine Owen Lloyd. Her daughter will succeed her.—Reuter.

NATIONAL WEALTH IN AMERICA.

$3115,000,000 Drop In Four Years.

New York.

The national "wealth" of the United States fell $115,000,000,000 from 1929 to 1933, estimates the National Industrial Conference Board.

The national "wealth" in 1932 was put at $247,000,000,000 in 1929 it was $362,000,000,000. National "wealth" means the dollar value of the country's physical assets—land, factories and other tangible goods.

Year to year fluctuations do not accurately measure the wealth of the nation in terms of its physical units, but give instead the estimated dollar value of these units according to prices for which they might theoretically have been sold in the different years.—Reuter.

STEAM AEROPLANE TESTED.

Economy At 100 M.P.H.

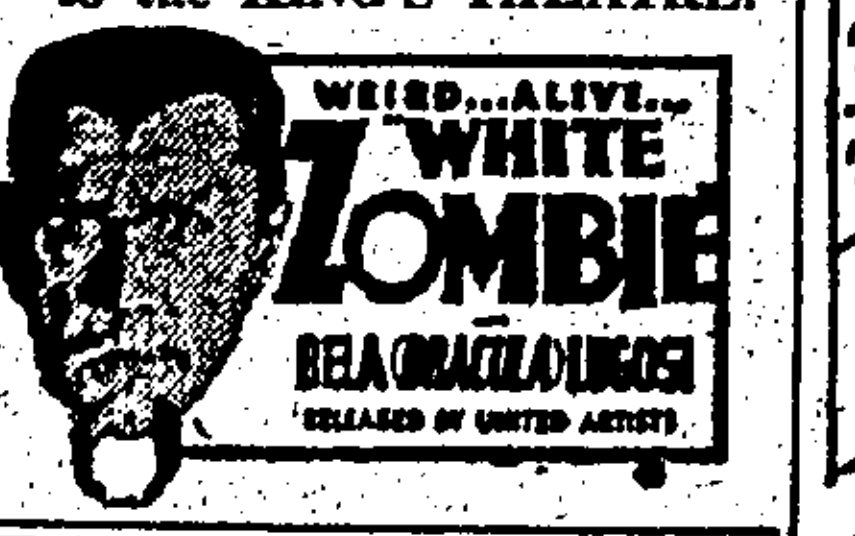

Oakland, California.

A steam aeroplane developed by two brothers here made three short test flights recently.

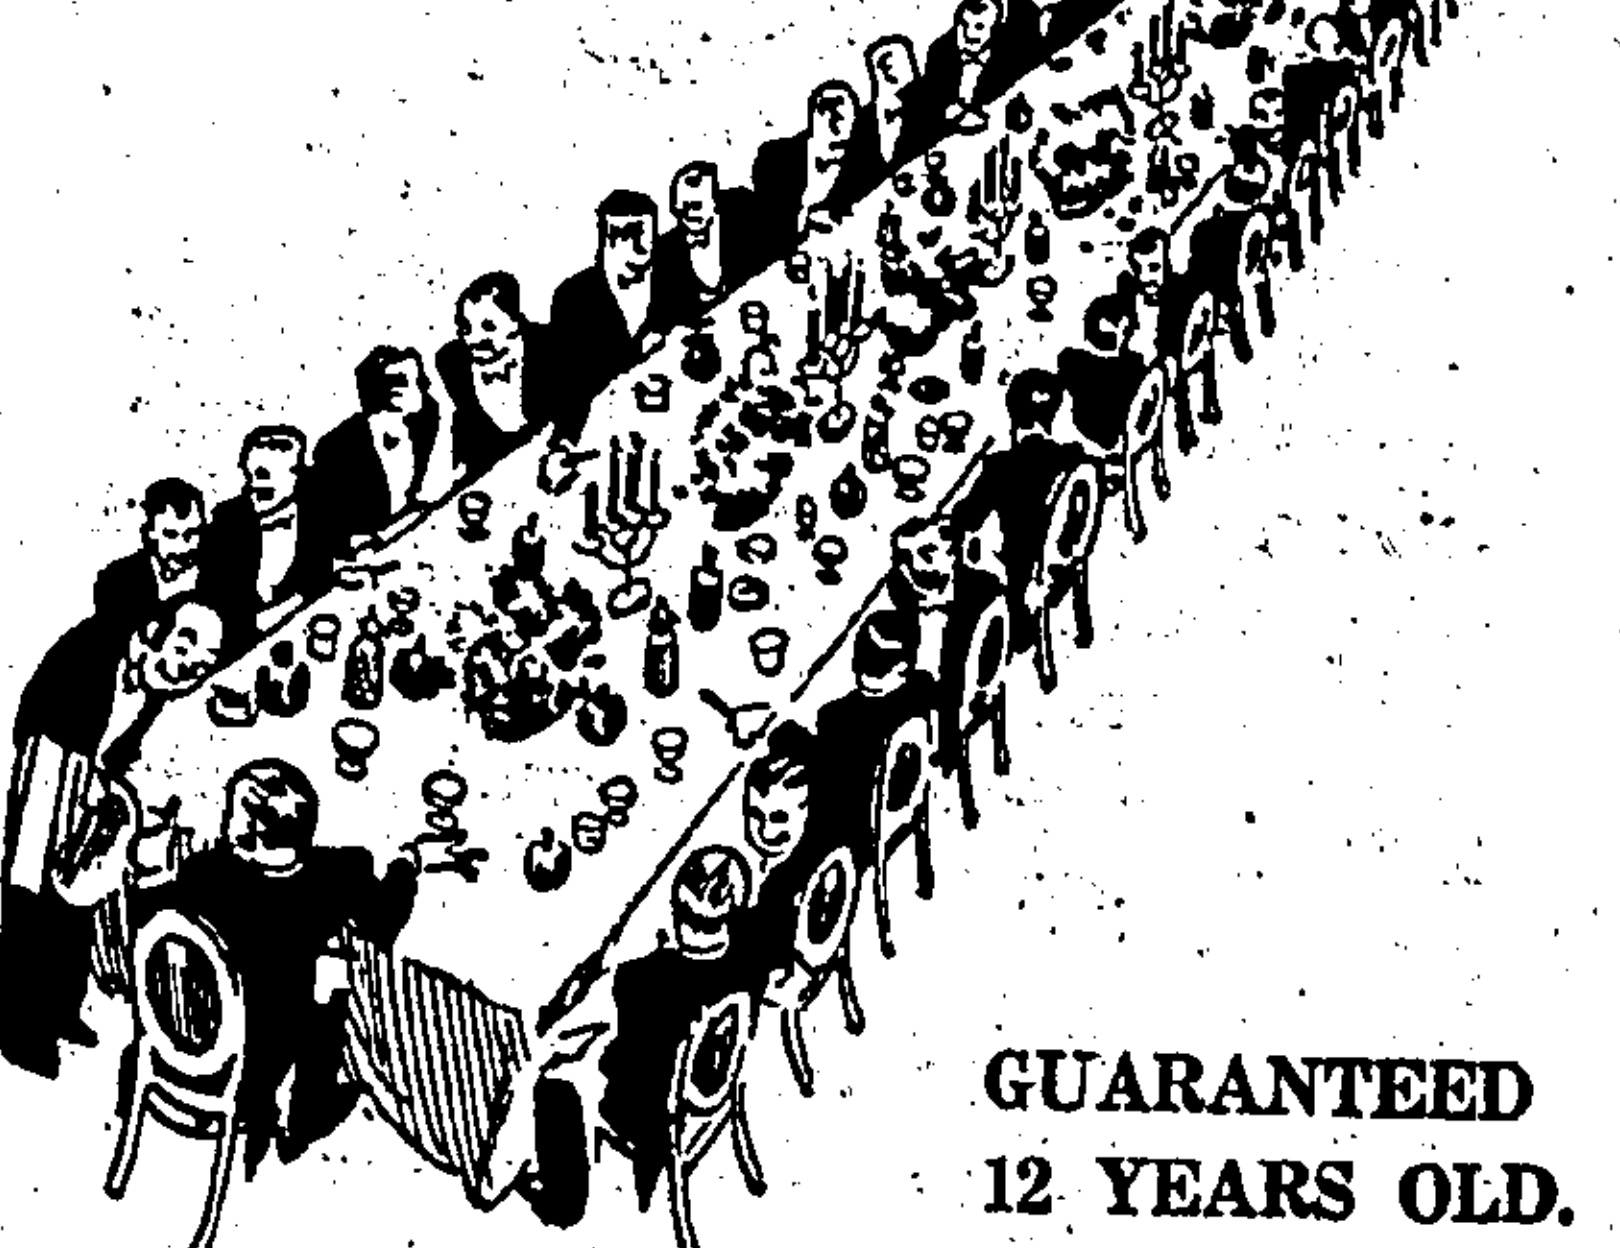

The engine developed about 90 horse-power they said. It is a two-cylinder oil burner. They described the engine as "very silent" in flight.

The brothers said they had made about 100 miles an hour and the cost of operation was lower than for a petrol motor.—Reuter.

Peoples Of The Pacific.

It is not a mere coincidence that during the past few days the benevolent campaign to promote the welfare of the peoples of the Pacific has advanced in two theatres as far apart as Canada and Fiji. In Victoria, British Columbia, the fifth Pacific Science Congress is sitting attended by 160 delegates from all over the world. From Suva a movement has just been launched with the object of reducing the mortality among the inhabitants of the South Sea Islands. The significance of the double event is explained by Dr. H. M. Tovey's presidential address at Victoria. The greatest justification of the Congress, he said, was the fact that problems, economic, scientific, and social, in the Pacific area are being viewed as a whole by teams of men who had hitherto viewed them with a local outlook. A concrete example of this international co-operation is the peaceful offensive which has been undertaken with Fiji as a base of operations. The sinews of war have been mainly supplied by the Rockefeller Foundation, dedicated to the service of hygiene irrespective of the race or colour of the beneficiaries of its bounties. Australia is by no means the least of the debtors. A Rockefeller gift rendered possible a close study of hookworm, to the imroads of which children in sub-tropical Australia are exposed. In 1931 the Foundation made the University of Sydney a grant of £20,000, the first instalment of £100,000 towards the building and equipment of a clinical laboratory. The campaign in the South Seas has accomplished three preliminary stages essential to future progress. The first was a series of medical surveys carried out by Dr. Lambert, a representative of the Foundation, in conjunction with local practitioners. The second was the inauguration of a child welfare scheme, in consequence of which the infantile death-rate has diminished by over 60 per cent., an amazing drop in view of the short period during which the lessons indoctrinated have had a chance of penetrating the native mind. The third stage was the establishment of a central medical school at Suva which trains natives for medical service. Probably its alumni could not compete in proficiency with the specialists of Harley and Macquarie streets; but they are qualified to deal with the work that comes to their hands, and are said to be skilful surgeons. A knowledge of anatomy should come easily to races which, until recently, dissected their features and limbs for purposes of adornment. These steps having been accomplished, the road is open for a further advance. One of the most tragic episodes of civilisation has been the effect of its impact upon the peoples of the Pacific. They had their ferocious tribal wars. Hurricanes and famines levied a toll. But for the depopulation of the Pacific, the white man's diseases, the white man's vices—and even his virtues—are considered to be mainly responsible. The European is more or less inoculated against certain maladies by long experience of them. An attack of measles causes him no grave concern, but it can devastate a Pacific island as can an epidemic of even a mild form of influenza. To him a cold is generally nothing more than a temporary nuisance. With the native of the Pacific it is liable to develop into tuberculosis. The introduction of clothing to these unsophisticated folk has not been an unmixed boon, because although their habits are clearly by nature these habits do not extend to the garments they wear out of deference to convention or in gratification of vanity. They have no idea of prophylactic sanitation. Thus the Pacific health campaign has no easy task before it, and there is a contributory cause to depopulation which may not be susceptible to the ministrations of medical science. This is the psychological factor. The untutored savage was fully occupied. In preparation for his forays he had to build canoes and fashion weapons. Victories were celebrated by feasts, which also required elaborate preparation, and were accompanied by religious rites and ceremonies. Civilisation has proscribed some of these pursuits. It has given him tools which in a few hours can do the work done in as many weeks by his primitive implements. It has, in several groups, by taking over his lands for a capital sum, rent, or an agreed royalty, made him a gentleman of independent means. Furnished with unimaginable luxuries, but deprived of former incentives to exertion, he loses zest in existence and pines away, an unconscious victim to boredom. Many anthropologists have drawn attention to this, and have submitted that the remedy for depopulation is to be found not only in the amplification of medical services, but in a policy directly designed to stimulate the native's interest in life.

HERE, THERE and EVERYWHERE

"Jack" Tovey

In the North Sea "war" between Red and Blue, which took place recently, Adml. Sir John Kelly, C-in-C. of the Home Fleet, served under Capt. J. C. Tovey, of the Rodney, who for that occasion commanded a division of which the Nelson was a unit.

"Jacy" Tovey is one of the coming men in the Navy. He won the D.S.O. at Jutland for conspicuous gallantry as captain of the destroyer Onslow.

In this little ship he first engaged a German light cruiser at point-blank range, peppering her with 4-inch shells, then went straight for the enemy's battle-cruisers and gave them his torpedoes.

"The Wicked Bible"

One of the prizes of the late Lord Rosebery's remarkable library was his copy of the first issue of the first edition of the Authorised Version, 1611. Mistakes in printing have always been inevitable, and the value to collectors of this particular issue lies in the world "He" printed for "She" in Ruth III, 15.

The outstanding instance of error, however, is in "The Wicked Bible" of 1631, which has the negative omitted from the Seventh Commandment. When the mistake was discovered by Archbishop Laud, the Star Chamber fined the poor printers £300, and ordered the edition of 1,000 copies to be burnt. About half-a-dozen escaped, to the joy of collectors.

Lord Macaulay used to deny that such a mistake had ever occurred until a surviving copy (now in the Lenox Library in New York) was shown to him in 1855. Oddly enough, the German printers committed a similar mistake in 1731 (a century later), and the single surviving copy of the offending work should still be in the old library of Wolfenbützel.

Facts You Did Not Know.

Carbon gas black is used instead of asbestos in a new automobile brake lining that is asserted to be oil, grease and water proof.

Demountable endless treads can be substituted for the rear wheels of a German inventor's motor truck to convert it into a tractor.

A tool that works on the principle of the hydraulic jack has been invented with which one man can shatter large blocks of concrete.

A buoy large enough to contain a man has been developed by the Spanish navy officer to enable crews to escape from sunken submarines.

WHY THE NATIONS HAVE MET WORLD ECONOMIC CONFERENCE

London, June 12. United States is not far from being self-sufficing—as much, according to some authorities, as 98 per cent. This vast economic unit shut her doors against immigration from Europe by drastic new laws (incidentally striking a heavy blow at the shipping trade) and against the importation of goods from abroad by the Fordney-McCumber Tariff in 1922 and the Hawley-Smoot Tariff in 1930.

The rate of business profits rose rapidly—by 25 per cent. between 1926 and 1929—and produced the New York Stock Exchange boom which led to the cataclysmic collapse of 1929.

At the same time, the position in America was complicated by the Central European situation, the American money which had been lent to Germany and Austria for commercial purposes not being recoverable.

Confidence was shaken all over the world. Enterprise was stifled. Consumption fell, and prices with it; and the whole economic system entered upon that vicious circle which, under the name of the "trade cycle" we have known before in a less violent form.

A Tragic Roundelay. What is meant by the "trade cycle" is that when confidence is diminished, A buys less from B, who is therefore forced to buy less from C, who is therefore forced to buy less from A, who is therefore forced to buy still less from B, and so on. In the past this process has gone on until something has given way, and then the trade cycle has begun anew with a boom.

The World Economic Conference has been summoned because the responsible rulers of the world are not sure whether we can get out of the present spin before we hit the ground. Its business is to get the machine on an even keel again. Its difficulty is a lack of agreement among the experts as to the causes of distresses which are not denied. No one, of course, doubts that the immediate evil lies in the falling price-level for primary commodities.

This means, to put it briefly, that by the time the producer has got his stuff to market he cannot get as much for it as it cost him to produce. Quite clearly he cannot go on in this way for more than a limited time. Little by little he collapses, his fields go out of cultivation, his labourers are unemployed, purchasing power is by so much diminished and in consequence prices fall still further.

But all the experts have each his own remedy for this fatuously tragic situation. (Continued on Page 13.)

TURKISH PRAISE FOR LONDON. Journalist Impressed By Theatres.

AMAZED BY CITY "RUSH"

Istanbul.

A Turkish journalist has just returned from a visit to London, Paris, Berlin and Rome—and he states that the British capital delighted him.

One thing he liked about London was the laundries. He declares that they washed and ironed his shirts far more expeditiously and carefully than elsewhere!

Moreover, he says, prices in London of hotels, transport, clothes and other necessities were about 30 per cent. cheaper than in any of the three other capitals.

The theatres impressed him, especially "the comfort, the dignified acting and the number of men and women who wore evening dress."

But above all the "rush" of London amazed him. He says: "After standing in the Strand for half an hour in the late afternoon, Paris, Berlin and Rome seemed like villages."—Reuter.

DEATHS.

HOLDMAN—At the Kowloon Hospital on Saturday July 8, at 2.50 a.m., Frederick Herbert Holdman, age 48. Funeral will pass the monument at 5.30 p.m. to-day. No flowers by request.

A "Big Five" From The U.S.A. Famous Figures At The Conference

Mr. Cordell Hull.

(U.S.A.)
MR. CORDELL HULL, who leads the American delegation, was President Roosevelt's choice for the all-important post of Secretary of State.

Although he was in Congress for nearly 25 years, Mr. Hull has none of the characteristics of the American politician. He is a tall, intellectual-looking, clean-shaven, grey-haired, with a slow and pleasant Southern drawl. He is known to his friends as "the Silent One of the Tennessee Mountains."

A lawyer by profession, he has had only one diversion in his life from politics and the law. He fought in the Spanish-American War.

He is now in the early "sixties," something of a recluse, more of a thinker than a public speaker. His stronghold is his study.

He is a master of detail, knows more about international tariffs and the League of Nations than any of his compatriots, and is the strongest advocate of the Democratic policy of low tariffs.

Personally, he is bound to make friends over here. He is a modest, even-tempered man with whom it is impossible to quarrel. He has a horror of self-advertisement and has the distinction of occupying the smallest space of any public figure in the United States in the American "Who's Who."

In Washington he lives in a quiet hotel and goes to and from his office in a tramcar. His home town is Carthage, Tennessee.

Like the ex-Kaiser, he takes his exercise by felling trees.

Senator Couzens.

Mr. James Couzens, the only Republican member of the American delegation, has been a Senator since 1922.

He is a sturdily-built man, wears pince-nez, is clean-shaven, has white hair and a firm mouth. He is a Presbyterian, and was born in Canada.

As a Republican he holds very independent views and has the reputation of being the most tenacious, not to say pugnacious, of all the Senators.

Mr. Couzens is in his sixty-first year. He has had a romantic career. He began life with nothing, had a board school education, and at 25 was a book-keeper in a coal-yard in Detroit. Among other customers whose accounts he indexed was a young engineer called "Hank" or Henry Ford.

The two young men became friends, and Couzens borrowed money from his sister in order to lend it to Ford for his experiments.

This was the beginning of the famous partnership which was to build up the great Ford motor-business.

The partnership lasted sixteen years. When Couzens sold out in 1919 he received more than $5,000,000 for his share. Before the slump he was officially listed as one of the five Americans with incomes of over $1,000,000 a year.

Senator Couzens has spent some $5,000,000 on philanthropic work. He has liberal ideas not generally associated with the Republican Party and has more than once denounced the banks and big industry, mainly on the ground of wage-cuts.

Senator Pittman.

Senator Kay Pittman, who succeeded Senator Borah as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee in March of this year, is a tall, lantern-jawed man.

He is a native of Missouri. After graduating at the George Washington University he began a legal practice at Seattle. He interrupted it to join "The Trail of '89" to Klondike, where he worked for two years as a miner.

At Dawson City his knowledge of the law proved valuable. He acted as counsel for a group of Australian miners who attacked the corruption of the American Government officials in Alaska.

In 1900 he married Miss Minnie Gates of Eureka, California, and migrated to Tonopah, Nevada, where his home now is.

He has been a Senator since 1912, has been prominent at Democratic Party Conventions and was for several years secretary of the Senate Democratic caucus.

Although he has dug for gold, Senator Pittman is a confirmed bi-metalist, and is to-day leader of the little group in the American Senate who have been nicknamed "The Silver Senators."

Mr. James Cox.

Mr. James Cox, ex-Governor of Ohio and Democratic candidate against Senator Harding in the Presidential election of 1920, is yet another example of the poor boy who has made good in the United States.

He was born and brought up on a small farm in Ohio, mastered his three "R's" at the local board school, and set out at the age of 16 to earn his daily bread. For a time he sold newspapers in the street, worked as a printer's devil, and even returned to his old school in the capacity of a teacher.

Journalism claimed him, and at the age of 19 he secured a permanent job as reporter on the "Cincinnati Enquirer" through obtaining a "scoop" in connection with a railway accident near his home town.

At 28 he was able to buy the "Dayton Daily News," a purchase which paved the way for his control of a whole group of Ohio newspapers.

He entered politics, was a Congressman from 1909 to 1913, and was elected three times Governor of his native State.

Mr. Samuel McReynolds. Mr. Samuel Davis McReynolds, like Mr. Cordell Hull, from Tennessee. The two men are old friends. Both are just over sixty. Both follow the profession of the law.

In appearance Mr. McReynolds, who is of Scottish descent some generations back, is a commanding, heavy-set figure. He stands six foot one in his stocking shoes. He has no outdoor hobbies, but is a great reader.

He was on the bench as judge of the Criminal Court of the 6th circuit of Tennessee for twenty years. He resigned in 1923 in order to enter Congress, and has been a member of that body ever since.

Mr. McReynolds takes an active interest in Freemasonry. He belongs to the pleasantest type of Southerner.

RUM-RUNNING IN TO BALTIC.

Six Vessels Flying The British Flag.

COMPLAINT LODGED IN LONDON
Helsingfors.

Following the report that the Finnish Minister in London had been instructed to ask permission from the British Government for the capture of a vessel described as a British rum-runner, it is now stated officially here that six rum-runners flying the British flag are at present operating in the Baltic.

It is also stated, however, that the crews of these vessels are practically entirely non-British and that most of them, including the captains, are Estonians.

The steamer regarding which the complaint was sent to London is stated to have been using a secret radio code between Estonia and Sweden.

Reuter was informed in Finnish circles in London that the question of reported rum-running off the Finnish coast had been the subject of discussions between Great Britain and Finland.—Reuter.

BICYCLE FACTORY FOR SOVIET.

Technical Assistance
From B.S.A.C.

Moscow.
The bicycle factory which was opened here last September with the technical assistance of the Birmingham Small Arms Co. now has an annual output of 60,000 bicycles according to statistics just issued.

A number of the Soviet workers were sent to England for special training. It is hoped that, in the future, the plant will be expanded to produce 120,000 machines a year.—Reuter.

LOCAL ARCHITECT ACQUITTED

P.W.D. Charges Fail
Against Mr. Gibson.

"NOT TECHNICALLY GUILTY"

At the resumed hearing at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday, of the charges against Mr. J. S. Gibson, a local architect, of alleged misrepresentation of the true conditions of two buildings under construction, and causing material divergence from plans submitted to the P.W.D., were dismissed.

Mr. Butters, the Magistrate said, "No divergencies had been noticed by Mr. Gibson, and I am prepared to believe him. But the fact that he was an authorised architect ought to have warned him."

"I cannot say that I approve of Mr. Gibson's conduct as an authorised architect in this case, but I do not think he is technically guilty. Any competent solicitor could drive a carriage and pair through the case."

The charges were in respect of two buildings, Nos. 279 and 281 Reclamation Street, which were under construction.

Mr. L. R. Andrewes, Assistant Crown Solicitor, prosecuted, and Mr. M. K. Lo appeared for the defendant.

Mr. Lo in his submission said that the prosecution was ill-advised and the summons should not have been taken out at all. He maintained that fraudulent misrepresentation had nothing to do with negligence or culpability. He added that he was really astounded that the Assistant Crown Solicitor should appear in Court to support the divergencies summons.

Summing up, Mr. Butters said that in the first instance he agreed with Mr. Lo regarding the responsibility of an authorised architect to the public in general. Dealing with the case in question, he found that the plans were executed by a man named Chow. All Mr. Gibson knew of Chow was that he had been approved of by an assistant.

The second summons was that Mr. Gibson had only condoned certain divergencies. Mr. Gibson's knowledge of the building before he signed the plans consisted only of a cursory glance from the street.

SIX CRUSOES ON PACIFIC ISLE.

Earthquakes Three Times A Week.

Sydney.
Six white men are living alone with a handful of natives on a little tropical island called Vanikoro, south-east of the Solomons.

This fact has been revealed here by Mr. C. L. Dawn, manager of a timber company, who has arrived here from the island.

The six men, he said, live in houses above the water. The only communication they have with the outside world is through their wireless station. They have three mails a year.

The islands is infested with crocodiles, which prevent the keeping of dogs and act as a great check to the multiplication of the wild pigs, which also flourish there. The water teems with fish and the six white men spend their spare time hooking many large varieties.

But there is a volcano not far away, and earthquake tremors are felt on the island about three times a week.—Reuter.

CHICAGO'S HUGE BEER BILL.

$2,000,000 Spent In 24 Days.

Chicago.
It took some $2,000,000 to slake Chicago's thirst in the first 24 days after 8.2 beer became legal according to an unofficial survey.

Brewers reported that the city had consumed about 2,400,000 cases and 48,000 barrels of the brew in that period. At 7½¢ a pint, the average retail price here, that would be more than $2,000,000 worth (at par). Nearly all of the breweries are running 24-hour shifts seven days a week.—Reuter.

To-Day's Short Story.

BREAKFAST FOR NONE

By Basil D.
Nicholson.

WHEN Laleham turned he handled the controls with mindless accuracy. He rose on the turn as an alternative to slowing down before it. It saved him, perhaps, a second and a half, which, to Laleham, was two hundred and eighty yards.

From below, his turn seemed like a sculptor's gesture, a lightning sketch of an immortal curve, a vindication of Laleham's mastery over the droning whine that stretched from his machine like a taut cord across the sky. To Laleham it was a moment when he must act by rote. To him the droning whine was silence, and its absence would have seemed an ominous, piercing sound.

As he neared the mark he prepared himself for a temporary death. He knew that the blood would be drained away from his head and forced towards his feet and finger-tips, leaving them unskilful, and that at the crucial moment of his bank it would withdraw even from behind his eyes and leave him sightless in a black and thumping world.

He knew just when this death would overtake him, and at just what part of the bank the strain would lessen, the blood flow back, and his sight and skill return. It had happened so often before.

He backed his judgment with his life on every bank. If the moment were ever to come when he needed his sight, and the world were still black and pounding, he would plunge like a silver dagger between the chequered seams and leave nothing behind him but a column of spray and a spatter of printer's ink.

To Laleham these turns did not seem at all classic. They were an unnatural wrenching. It was typical of him that he resented them because of the unfair strain they put on his machine. He had no feelings on his own account, but there was something almost unbalanced in his bitterness, for the plane's sake, at the strains of sharp turns taken at high speeds.

DEAF CHILDREN HEAR CONCERT.

"Bone Conduction" Of Sound.

NEW YORK EXPERIMENT.

New York.
A new electro-mechanical instrument, which transmits sound vibrations through the bones of the head, has made it possible for a group of deaf children in a class-room of the New York School for the Deaf to hear clearly their first radio programme.

Some of the children are nearly totally deaf because of defective ear drums. The instrument side-tracked the defective drums and carried the vibrations direct to sound-sensitive parts of the brain, it was explained. The system "operates on the principle of 'bone conduction' of sound."

When the instrument was turned on, lip reading and sign language were forgotten. Bright, eager anticipation on the faces changed instantly to expressions of surprise and wonder. It was explained that many were experiencing for the first time something akin to the sensations of hearing that the normal person takes for granted. The children heard clearly, even though many spoken words escaped their understanding. They responded easily to the music. Smiles lighted their faces and crude vocal expressions escaped their lips as they evidently recognized words taught them in the classes through other means.

Over each child's head was a small metal band that clamped an electric vibrator, no larger than a pocket knife, against the mastoid or the cheek bone. Wires linked the vibrators to an amplifier and then to the microphone into which the performers sang and spoke. Each child, by means of a small button on the individual vibrator, regulated the intensity of the vibrations to suit his needs. Sometimes the device worked best when placed against the forehead. The children made their own adjustments to get the maximum sound effect.—Reuter.

They called him, at one time, "Kindness to Airplanes," but that name dropped out when he reached the ace-class. He was one of those rare airmen who talk of landmen as a class apart, just as sailors do. And he always had a theory that the divided allegiance of airmen with the land was a calamity.

"Pilots multiply speed as much as manufacturers," he might be heard to say. "Ten years ago blacking out meant death. To-day, it is just one of the factors we calculate in turning. That is an extreme example. But our reactions are quicker all round. Our technique is altogether more subtle."

"We could fly faster 'planes than the manufacturers can make. But there will be no more progress as long as we are earthbound. The high-speed courses the landmen give us to fly are scarcely bigger than circus-fents. You go flat out for one minute—two minutes—three minutes. Then you wrench her round a landsman's curve too sharp to take on anything but a bicycle, and do the same again."

MONDAY'S STORY.

Monday's story will be
"Nor The Jury," by Selwyn
Jepson.

"We are like children's conkers whirling on the end of a string in tethered curves. Speed? As long as we revolve round an amphitheatre for landmen to gaze at here will be no more speed. We want a straight course and aerial buoys."

He was not altogether popular. He took no trouble to be gracious. As the best pilot of them all he could have afforded to congratulate Aird on breaking the record. It was his own record, of course, and that would have made most men very careful not to appear bad losers. As a matter of fact, everyone knew that Aird had had first trial with the new grooved blades and that his record would stand just until Laleham cared to climb into his cockpit and clap another half-dozen miles an hour on to it. But Laleham had that queer kink of his about kindness to airplanes and cared nothing for appearances. Aird took his corners pretty close, and Laleham didn't like it.

"The young fool will have the wings off her," he growled, watching him. "He can't take his corners like a gentleman."

Of course Aird heard of it. He was a nice enough kid, but just at the moment it riled him.

"Laleham can't take his corners at all," he said, peeling off his gloves. "He hasn't the guts."

That, of course, was that. It went the rounds at once. After that you were either pro-Aird or pro-Laleham, and what you said about the other wasn't even intended to be reasonable.

Laleham gave plenty of openings for attack. He talked too much. The atmosphere just then wasn't exactly charitable, and a good deal of what he said got twisted. Whenever he heard the new versions of his remarks about people Laleham lost his temper. He took the whole thing too seriously. So, for that matter, did Aird, but he had the sense to take up a careless attitude that made Laleham look ridiculous.

The atmosphere pretty soon gets poisoned with intrigue and pettiness in a mess—especially with men whose nerves are being tested highly already.

In the end, when Laleham and Aird came into the smoking-room together the rest of us watched them furiously over our papers, half expecting a stand-up fight. Aird, of course, made the "most" of his advantage in good sense. He would call out, "Hallo, Laleham!" as if there were nothing the matter, and Laleham would grunt contemptuously and turn away. And Aird would make himself the centre of a noisy group and laugh and chatter a little too loudly to show that he didn't, as he said, "make a whole-time job of poor Laleham."

You know the bare lines of what happened in the end. You probably read the puzzled report of the Commission of Inquiry on the T24 and the T 36 after they had been brought up with grappling hooks.

BOXING'S G.O.M.

Death of "Phil Scott's Friend."

Mr. William H. Muldoon, known in America as the "Grand Old Man of Boxing," and the most popular sportsman in the United States has died at the age of eighty-seven. He was trainer of the famous champion, John L. Sullivan, and was later called "Phil Scott's Friend." Even when Scott was repeatedly beaten, Mr. Muldoon never lost faith in him.

Mr. Muldoon never married, and his vast fortune went to his secretary, Miss Margaret Farrell, aged forty-seven, whom he adopted last year as his daughter.

When he announced his adoption of Miss Farrell, he said: "It would be a good thing if more men would show their appreciation of what their secretaries do. Their wives and daughters rush around spending their money, while their secretaries do all the work."

His first interest in sport began when he did some boxing after night school.

His reputation as an athlete grew as he himself did and when, after serving five years in the Police Force, he started the Police Athletic Club, his career as a sportsman was assured.

He became a Graciano-Roman wrestling champion and then established "Muldoon's Hygienic Institute" at Purchase, New York.

He never dieted and always said the things people liked best were the things they should eat in moderation. People, he would say, often ruined their health by talking too much.

He never touched strong drink and was violently opposed to smoking which he said was the most deadly of all habits.

His father, who had served in the Royal Engineers, was an emigrant from Ireland.

COUNTY CRICKET CHECKS FOR SUSSEX, ESSEX AND NOTTS

TYLDESLEY AND VERITY PROMINENT

Lancashire Lose Points To Sussex.

WARWICK IN THIRD PLACE

London, To-day.
Ernest Tyldesley (94 and 105) and Headley Verity (14 for 83) headed the honours list in the first-class cricket matches which concluded yesterday.

In spite of Tyldesley's fine effort Lancashire were forced to follow on against Sussex at Hove. The veteran No. 3 batsman compiled 199 out of Lancashire's 540 in the two innings. Inspired bowling by Mayer, the Warwickshire fast bowler, was responsible for Hampshire's defeat at Southampton. Mayer took 10 for 105 to send the mid-land county into third place in the table.

Taking second knock Glamorgan easily secured major points against Notts, and a quick century by Townsend gave Derbyshire first innings points against Essex, for whom Nichols scored a faultless 135. Centuries by Timms and Vallance Jupp robbed Somerset of five points at Northampton.

Tourist's Fourth Defeat

Verity's brilliant bowling at Harrogate gave Yorkshire a handsome victory over the West Indies touring eleven. The champions scored only 448 in the two innings, but the tourists lost by 200 runs. This was their fourth defeat.

R. H. Human, the Light Blue who scored a century in each innings against Surrey at the Oval earlier in the season, registered his fourth three-figure innings of the season when he totalled 115 against H. D. Leveson-Gower's XI at Eastbourne. R. D. Winlaw, the Cambridge skipper, scored 122 and 50 not out to give the Light Blues a comfortable victory.

Results as cable by Reuter:
Warwickshire beat Hampshire by 4 wickets at Southampton.
Hants 260 (Marger 5 for 70).
112 (Marger 5 for 35).

GARRISON BILLIARDS.

"B" COMPANY LINCOLNS WIN IN SIX-A-SIDE

To Meet Headquarters In Semi-Final

GAME UNFINISHED

(By SPOT BALL).

"B" Company, Lincoln, qualified for the Semi-Final Round of the Garrison Six-A-Side Billiards competition when they beat "D" (M.G.) Company of the same regiment by 101 points at the Soldiers' Club on Thursday night.

"B" Company will now meet Headquarters Wing of the Lincolns in the semi-final.

Although L/Cpl. Buxton chalked up a 21 break he lost narrowly to L/Cpl. Baldry by two points. Pte. Abbott led Sgt. Green by 80-23 at one period, but breaks of 21, 23 and 16 reduced his lead. Abbott won by 26 points.

Owing to insufficient time to finish their game Cpl. McGuinness and L/Cpl. Maw were forced to abandon their game at 87-74 in favour of the former.

Detailed scores.
"B" Company "D" Coy.
Baldry 150 Buxton 148
Manson 150 George 135
Bell 138 Dawson 150
Green 150 Malpas 93

Y.M.C.A. STAGE THIRD AQUATIC GALA TO-NIGHT

To New Events To Feature Card.

MEN v WOMEN RELAY

(By CRAWL).

The third monthly swimming carnival of the European Y.M.C.A. takes place to-night in the "Y" pool, Kowloon, and promises to be even better than its predecessors.

Two new events—the Hong team race and Diving for plates—will be featured, while the team race of five men against four women should also create considerable interest.

The water polo game will be between sides representing England and the Rest. The sides will be very evenly balanced. Schreuder, the "Y" skipper, will not be participating.

A young "veteran" in C. B. Easterbrooke and a newcomer in F. P. Anslow will be out in the 50 Yards Aggregate for the Cup presented by His Honour, Chief Justice J. R. Wood, while many of those who swam previously will also be seen in action.

Owing to a great number of people suffering from infectious ears, the Diving for plates has drawn only five entries, but the event should prove a great attraction.

The Hong team race has drawn four entries. The Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, Jardine Matheson and the Asiatic Petroleum Company have all entered teams.

This event has always been one of the outstanding features in Y.M.C.A. galas, and to-night's race should prove no exception.

After the swimming programme has been completed, dancing in the West Lounge to the strains of Mickey's Melody Makers will be indulged in until the early hours of the morning.

The Entries

The following are the entries.
50 Yards Aggregate Handicap—
F. P. Anslow, C. B. Easterbrooke, G. Fowler, E. Fullager, C. B. Easterbrooke, S. Fowler, R. Goldman, T. Ingram, A. Mitchell, H. J. Lange, D. Sutherland and R. B. Wood.

Ladies 50 Yards Handicap—
Miss D. Hunt, Mrs. P. McMahon, Miss Weller, Miss Hunter and Miss J. Shoemith.

Diving for Plates—
S. Fowler, C. B. Easterbrooke, D. Sutherland, R. Goldman and Christensen.

Hong Team Race—
Jardine Matheson and Co.—L. G. Frost, M. Ralton, C. Chadderton, A. Dinnen and S. Dunn.

Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank—
S. Gray, A. Lowson, G. Travers, B. Stillard and G. Bradford.

A.P.C.—A. J. Rasmussen, Lloyd J. Gardner, R. L. Cherrill and E. W. Ralton.

50 Yards Backstroke—
W. Campbell, H. Lange, A. G. Donn and F. P. Anslow.

Team Race (5 men v 4 women)—
Men—W. P. Kerr, R. Goldman, E. W. Ralton, G. Fowler and H. Lange.
Women—Miss D. Hunt, Miss Weller, Miss S. Dainton and Mrs. P. McMahon.

Water Polo—
England—S. Fowler, C. Jenner and J. E. Henry; E. W. Ralton; R. Goldman, G. Fowler and W. P. Kerr.
The Rest—H. Angus, A. G. Donn and H. Lange; E. Fullager; B. Rasmussen, W. Campbell and D. Sutherland.

ST. ANDREW'S COURSE FASCINATING

BOBBY JONES TELLS OF FIRST EXPERIENCE

PLAYER ROUND IN 43

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 3.

THE 1933 British open golf tourney got under way here to-day. On what is claimed to be one of the oldest links in the world, and certainly the most famous, with a strong aggregation of foreign players, including Americans and Argentine stars, hoping to carry the title away from British shores.

As to the playing qualities of St. Andrews, opinions differ. Bobby Jones has said it is the finest he has ever played over. Yet when he first tried it he said it was the worst he had ever set foot on, adding that he failed completely to understand why golfers went into ecstasies about such a flat piece of uninteresting country.

This is a view held by a good many people on their first visit to St. Andrews. The impression is gained that you can drive anywhere without getting into serious trouble, specially if you keep to the left at practically all the holes. And yet if you start a round with this idea in your head, your score is sure to swell considerably above what you think it should be. Here is what Jones has to say about it.

"In my humble opinion, St. Andrews is the most fascinating golf course I have ever played. When I first played there in 1921 (that was the occasion when he putted between his legs as a gesture of disgust), I was unable to understand the reverence with which the place was regarded by my British friends. I considered St. Andrews among the worst courses I had ever seen, and I am afraid I was even disrespectful of its difficulties. The maddening part of the whole thing was that, while I was certain the course was easy, I simply could not make a good score. Self-

HAMPTON ENTERS FINAL.

Stewart's Golf Defeat By 2 And 1.

H. Hampton (6) beat W. A. Stewart (7) by 2 and 1 to enter the Final Round of the Kowloon Golf Club's Summer Cup competition.
Hampton will meet A. T. Braley in the Final over 36 holes.

CRAWFORD

(Winner of "Tennis Double").

Jack Crawford, who was born in 1908, is just 25 years old. He has his home in Sydney and is married to Marjorie Cox, a former Singles champion of N.S. Wales.

In 1932 Jack Crawford and his wife won the Mixed Doubles Championship of Australia. In that season Crawford was triple champion of Australia.

Crawford won the N.S. Wales Singles Championship in 1927 for the first time and continued doing so till last November when Vines won the title.

Crawford won the Singles Championship of Australia in 1931 and 32 and again early this year, also the Doubles title three times, namely in 1929 and 30 with H. O. Hopman and in 1932 with E. F. Moon.

In 1932 he beat Jiro Satoh in Australia in the Championship and visiting England won the Singles and Doubles titles at Queen's Club, London, beating Dr. Gregory, Bouasus, Olliff and Fred Perry.

He beat Rene Lacoste in the International with France.
This year Crawford beat Henri Cochet to win the French Championship and completed the "double" yesterday when he beat Vines at Wimbledon.

SWIMMING

Recognised Olympic Games Style at V.R.C.

Well Varied Programme For To-night's Carnival.

LIONEL PEREIRA EXPECTED TO WIN "A" HANDICAP

Medley Team Race

Competition between the members of the V.R.C. is very keen at the moment and the Night Fete which is to take place to-night promises to live up to the tradition of the V.R.C. galas.

"Fred and his Pals", the seven-instrument jazzband, have been engaged for the dancing which will follow the swimming.

Variety in the swimming events will be one of the features of the evening. The swimmers will be seen in the three official styles recognised at the Olympic Games—the Breast-stroke, Back-stroke and Crawl.

Both the "A" and "B" events will be 75 yards Medley Races enforcing the use of all three styles.

Although it is a handicap event, Lionel Roza-Pereira looks like winning in the "A" class race. He is the back-stroke champion of the Colony and one of the fastest sprinters. H. M. Remedios, who is also competing in the Club's Breast-Stroke star.

In the "B" event E. L. Gosano and E. M. Marques have an advantage, being fast breast-stroke men, but A. A. Roza, is very speedy with the crawl.

G. Lynn, the scratch man in this class, will not be competing.

The "C" class event has been increased from 50 yards to 100 yards, and the members will be called upon to combine speed with stamina. A notable absentee from the Novice Class event will be S. Gidley, who registered a popular win in this event at the last Fete.

Diving Stars.
Edward Roza, the Colony's diving champion will enliven the evening with graceful plunges from the spring board.

Roza and Ozorio have been practising a comic diving act during the past month, and spectators have quite a surprise awaiting them.

The inter-members Water Polo match, which resulted in an exciting draw at the last Fete, will be re-played.

The following are the teams:
"A" team—M. M. de V. Soares, L. Gosano, J. E. Sousa, H. M. Remedios, A. M. Rodrigues, A. A. Roza and C. A. Roza-Pereira.

"B" team—G. J. Gutierrez, L. Roza-Pereira, F. W. Ambrose, A. A. Gutierrez, P. Delgado, E. L. Gosano and L. Barros.
The medley team race is being staged for the first time and should prove itself a popular innovation.

LEAGUE BASEBALL TO-MORROW

South China Confident Against Americans.

LAST MEETING OF SEASON.

(By "IKE")

South China and the Hong Kong Americans will clash to-morrow on the baseball diamond at Caroline Hill, for the third and last time in the League season. The game is scheduled to start at 4.30 p.m. sharp, and the League Officials expect the largest attendance of any game this year.

South China are confident of giving the Americans a good trouncing, but it should be a close game if every man of the opposing team shows up. Two of the Americans live in Canton, and they have been unable to get here for the last games.

John Mayhew, the new manager of the American team, since Al Huebner left for the United States, tells me that he has received news from Biggs and Newall of Canton stating that they are certain to be in the Colony for the game.

Biggs is their outstanding short-stop. He will probably pitch this week-end, along with "Lefty" Bowen and Brown, another new "find". Another new player to appear on the diamond is Jackson, a crack infielder, according to the Americans' manager.

South China will have the same line-up as in their last game when they beat the Americans and are tied the Americans in the League standing. Having won a game from the Americans after losing the first one South China will make a tremendous endeavour to clinch this game and thus retain their 1932 title.

Matty Chang will catch, with B. Chang on the mound. Tricky Little T. Kim will probably do his share at short-stop.

The probable line-up are as follows:

H.K. Americans		S. China.
Wright	c	M. Chang
Biggs-Brown	p	B. Chang
T. Leonard	1b	Tommy Chan
Shank	2b	C. C. Leung or Pau Ka-ping
Newall	ss	Henry Young
McInnes	3b	Tommy Kim
Gilson	1f	Ed. Chang or T. Fong

FOOD AND HOME ECONOMICS

Easy Luncheons For Summer

Much Can Be Done With Cold Beef.

ECONOMICAL DISHES

Luncheon, or tiffin as we term the mid-day meal in Hong Kong, is quite one of the easiest of meals to make attractive at this time of the year; and unusual, even if one has only ordinary everyday goods to deal with.

Time counts, of course; it always does in this matter of meals.

If time is short, much can be done with cold meat engagingly arranged and a good looking salad. A fresh fruit cocktail could precede this dish, or a tinned fruit one, whichever is the more convenient, allowing a good cheese and celery to precede the coffee.

On a dull day one can do delightful things with hot sandwiches, or a quickly made egg dish, or a light grill and some fish.

A joint of salt beef—silver-side, as they poetically call it—is an excellent standby. This seems to be slightly differently pickled from the home-side method, and one generally finds that pickled beef needs a good soaking in several waters.

Cold Beef Best

At this time of the year it is better to cook it and refrain from cutting it until it is cold. With this good pink beef one can do all sorts of things. It can be carved at the table or thinly sliced and arranged on a dish—preferably white, with parsley or watercress added for relief. For companions one may give it a salad of potatoes and mayonnaise or salad cream, and one of celery, apples and walnuts with French dressing. Green peppers added to this latter salad are good if one likes the flavour.

Light Fish Dish

Prawns or other fish in aspic make a light dish, and celery juice should be added to the jelly and green peppers finely chopped may be mixed with it. If one is doubtful regarding fish here in summer, fried cods roes from the tin make a quick tiffin savoury and should be served upon rounds of fried toast.

Bananas with sugar and cream, served in individual glasses make a sweet that is quick, and dear to the palates of children. Pineapple custard, chilled and also served in individual glasses is another favourite with the children.

Left Overs

For economical family meals you can turn left-over boiled potatoes into a crown border by mashing them, arranging them round a fire-proof dish, and browning them in the oven or under the grill. Fill the centre with cooked peas or beans or carrots, or a mixture of these, or even spring greens or cabbage, very finely chopped or

APPLE STRUDEL

Often the most elaborate-seeming dishes are the simplest to prepare. Apple Strudel is a sweetmeat without which no Continental festive table is complete. It may be served at dinner as a dessert with a good custard sauce, or as an adjunct to the testable it will be a pleasant surprise. Here is the recipe. Make a pastry of half a pound of flour, one teaspoonful of sugar, one tablespoonful of nut oil, and a little water. Roll out as thinly as tissue paper and spread with a quarter pound of clarified butter. Mix together one teaspoonful of cinnamon, a quarter pound of sugar, a quarter pound of raisins, two ounces of ground almonds, and two finely chopped apples. Sprinkle this mixture on to the pastry rather thickly, roll up, place in rows in a Dredge with castor sugar.

IMPROVING OATMEAL FLAKES.

To improve the colour and flavour of oatmeal flakes when adding them to cookie mixtures, sprinkle the flakes on shallow pan and heat in a moderate oven until they have browned a little.

sieved, and seasoned and reheated. For a pernickety guest you might accompany it with asparagus—out of a tin at the moment—mounted on fresh hot buttered toast, with a creamy sauce poured over it, and if the exchequer will allow you a few mushrooms, so much the better.

Peel the mushrooms and cook them with their stems in fast-boiling salted water for about eight minutes.

Hot Sandwich

Choose a nice large one for each person and chop the rest. Mix the chopped ones with one or two tablespoonfuls melted butter and a tablespoonful of finely chopped onion.

Add a little finely chopped celery or parsley and one finely chopped pickled walnut. Stir over the fire for five minutes, and fill the large mushrooms with the mixture.

You can serve the beef hot too if you give it just long enough to make it curl up at the edges.

For a hot sandwich you can combine this crisp grilled beef with slices of toasted and buttered bread, grilled tomato, and a little chutney or sharp sauce.

Iced Chocolate Gateau

Ingredients:

Four ounces of flour.
Two ounces of butter.
Two dessertspoonfuls of castor sugar.

Two eggs.

Two tablespoonfuls of icing sugar.

A little milk.

Two ounces of plain chocolate.

Twelve drops of vanilla essence.

Beat the butter and castor sugar to a cream, mix with it the flour, chocolate, finely grated, and the vanilla essence. Beat in the yolks of the eggs and two dessertspoonfuls of milk. Turn the mixture into a small tin mould or cake tin, and bake in a moderate oven for about twenty-five to thirty minutes.

Fresh Fruits Welcomed At Most Meals

Breakfast Not Only Time When Appetite Needs Stimulating.

A few experiments will show the housewife that fresh fruit will be as welcome for luncheon or dinner as for breakfast.

Any meal is made more interesting and nutritious by the judicious use of fruit. As a cocktail the appetite is stimulated and the flow of digestive juices increased. Fruit served as a salad with a plain French dressing provides contrast in flavours between the main course and the sweet course. As a final course fruit is valuable since its tartness of flavour stimulates the flow of an alkaline saliva which aids in the prevention of tooth decay.

Grapes, well washed and chilled, make a delightful dessert. The large bunches are divided into single portions for serving.

Halves of grapefruit thoroughly chilled and served with a maraschino cherry and some of the syrup in each half are an excellent dessert to finish a dinner.

The combination of grapefruit in salads is almost legion. A plain grapefruit and lettuce salad is always suitable for a dinner salad and will be particularly welcome to those who are dieting to reduce.

Grapefruit and avocado pear salad is most delicious. Grapefruit and Chinese cabbage is another inviting combination.

All fruit cocktails gain zest if grapefruit is added to the mixture. Or grapefruit alone is an acceptable appetizer.

Cranberries also make delicious cocktails. The juice is available bottled on the market or you can make it yourself.

GREENS ESSENTIAL TO HEALTH

Correct Preparation Of Cabbage.

Green vegetables are essential to health, as they provide the right kinds of salts and some vitamins. The cabbage is one of the most valuable and has the virtues of being easy to grow, cheap to buy, and always available. It is most important that it should not be overcooked.

Prepared in the following way it is as tender as spinach. It should be cut up and left to soak for an hour in a bowlful of cold water with a handful of salt. Have a saucepan of boiling water ready, put the cabbage into this and boil fast for three minutes. Take out and drain, and empty the pan.

Put a large teaspoonful of water into the saucepan, bring to the boil, and add a good pinch of carbonate of soda. Put the cabbage back into the pan and boil gently for half an hour. Take it out, strain, and chop up finely with a little butter, pepper, and salt.

The Vegetable Problem

Too Much Overcooked Cabbage.

Can the average Englishwoman cook vegetables? This question has been raised by Sir John Russell, Director of the Rothamsted Experimental Station, Harpenden.

"The greatest problem of market gardening," Sir John states, "is to persuade the woman in the kitchen to cook vegetables so that they be eaten with pleasure and satisfaction."

"It would be possible to produce a much greater variety of vegetables in this country if there were sufficient demand for them," he said. "But while they are cooked as, generally they are, the mere husband cannot be expected to be enthusiastic."

"Cabbage too often is served as a sloppy mess," he added, "and vegetables in stews are cooked until they are almost unrecognisable."

THE DUTCH METHOD
Professor Winifred Cullis (of the London School of Medicine for Women), commenting on this view, stated: "It is a vital question. As things are the cabbage is often liable to be the most disappointing item in an English meal. Steaming or cooking vegetables in the oven should be encouraged, as this not only retains their valuable juices, but avoids the messiness of the over-boiled and badly drained vegetables."

Mr. Iwan Kriens (Headmaster, L.C.C. School of Cookery and Waiting), said: "There is not so much wrong with the cooking of the British housewife, but it is too conservative. Aubergines, artichokes, plum tomatoes, and cardoons are vegetables which can be easily cooked after a few lessons."

"In Holland," the "light of my birth," they cook the much-abused cabbage first by boiling it till it is nearly tender, and then finishing it off in butter or fat."

CHINESE CHICKEN.

Chop up fine a small pineapple and saute the fruit in three tablespoonfuls of butter, add four table spoonfuls of flour and cook until thick and smooth. Then add two cupfuls of diced cooked chicken and one cupful of chicken stock or boiling water, with half a cupful of shredded celery and half a small green chili finely shredded. Cook slowly five minutes, season well, then garnish with toasted shredded almonds.

BREAKFAST FOR NONE

The T 34, you remember, had been wrenched its starboard wing clean out of its welded socket, sheath and all. There was no flaw in the manufacture. It seemed just to have met a greater strain than it was built to stand, and to have given way under it. They could find nothing wrong with the T 36, except that its screw was smashed to bits by its impact with the sea. And no one could say why either plane had been down there against orders.

That is to say only one man could, and he didn't. He was a close-mouthed ground-mechanic whose father had been our coachman in the days when people still had coaches. I had to drag it out of him, piece by piece, but in the end I got the story pretty clear. It isn't, you will understand, for everyone's consumption, but here it is for yours.

The night before, he had been working late taking down an engine on the mechanic's bench in the hangar when Aird and Laleham came in together. The men knew what sort of terms they were on quite as well as we did, so my man Evans was a bit surprised, and listened.

They seemed to be plotting out a course, but he didn't then know what for. They mentioned a wind-mill near Selsey, another a shade west of Littlehampton, the Owers Lightship, and a chequered buoy on a five-fathom shoal about seven miles off the mouth of the Arun. They argued a whole lot about marks, resting their map on a dismantled cylinderhead, and finally seemed to agree about it.

Evans said that as long as they were arranging details and discussing marks they seemed friendly and businesslike, but as soon as the map was away they grew "polite as lizards."

"Five o'clock, then," said Laleham, finally.

"Five o'clock," agreed Stokes. They shook hands formally, left the hangar, and went off in different directions. Even then Evans didn't have lost his lead deliberately—that tumble to it. To tell you the truth, I'm not sure I would have. Wisdom only comes easily after the event.

That's why so many people write good histories of the war. Just then Evans used to sleep in a kind of lobby over the hangar—you couldn't part him from that hanger—and when he heard the unmistakable droning whine of Schneider Cup engines just before dawn it did begin to trickle through his thick head what Aird and Laleham had been arranging.

He didn't waste time trying to stop them. He knew they probably had some general authorisation that would cover them, and as a subordinate he couldn't interfere. Besides, they wouldn't let a little thing like that worry them now that they were already taxi-ing out across the water.

By the time they had roared forwards over the surface, bumped badly once or twice, and made their getaway, he was already roaring down the Chichester road on a Coventry Eagle.

I asked him what good he expected that to do, and he pushed his fingers through his mixture of hair and sump oil and said, after some thought: "Reckon I wanted to see what it was I couldn't stop them doing, sir."

Not a man of infinite resource, you will gather, but I should just hate to have to say precisely what he should have done. What strikes one is how calmly he took not being able to do anything—he wasn't even sure enough of his ground to risk a reprimand—and how cold-bloodedly he decided that, anyway, it would be fun to watch. Evans was like that—a natural realist.

Of course, there was no traffic on the roads, but how he got alive to Selsey in a shade over half an hour the Lord only knows.

He thinks he got here at the end of their first lap. Anyway, when he got his first clear view of them, they were rounding the Owers Lightship. The T36 was a shade ahead. It was madness for them to race together, but that's what they were doing—and Evans knew it was Laleham in it by the characteristic way he took the corner. You remember Laleham's swirling, rocketing, open turns that always looked too wide and never were?

The T34 tried to cut it too close with a vertical bank, and you could just about hear the air rip as the plane got slung flat outwards by centrifugal force. Whether a man is a gentleman on corners is a matter of opinion; whether he is a dam' fool isn't. Evans says Aird tried to take this as close as a belt over a pulley. Just for a moment he seemed to be getting away with it, but he balked, eased her off, and slewed out on a wide curve that made him no better off than Laleham. And he was still behind.

Evans began to grasp, then, that this wasn't just an ordinary race. No man risks court-martial and disgrace for a frolic—not before breakfast, anyway. They were both of them chewing up their machines—Laleham letting her flat out on the straight before he'd picked up speed, till she must have been shuddering to her sheath-bolts, and Aird cornering like a madman.

Laleham was quite right. Aird had no judgment. He couldn't add just his tactics to his speed. The beauty of Laleham's cornering was that it almost adjusted itself. When they started down the straight Evans realised that he was watching a kind of duel. They neither of them minded whether they came back. Whichever of them did was faced with disgrace.

The T34 was a faster plane, but Laleham was coaxing the 36 on front inch by inch. They went round over Littlehampton way with the same droning whine.

It was after sunrise, and their silver wings caught the sun as they turned, and made them glitter "like bloody knives"—so Evans said. He had been reading thrillers.

The 34 was still behind, but not slap over his head, Evans saw Laleham take the Selsey windmill turn too wide and leave an instant's pause before he opened up and shot down the straight.

Aird took that turn too closely, too, but got away with it. Evans said he heard a noise "like a board hitting the water" as Aird wrenched her round the bend. He says he could see the wing-tips vibrating and hear the air making a noise like ripped calico as she slipped flat outwards from the mark. But Aird got her round, and the 36 only had about twenty yards lead.

It came to him then that Laleham had lost his lead deliberately—that for some reason he wanted Aird to think his cornering was a success. But he was not prepared for what happened at the Owers Lightship. Laleham went into an impossibly close turn, as if hurried out of his usual tactics. Aird followed him, just as Evans reckoned they'd both blacked out and let themselves in for tearing their wings off while they were blind with the turn. Laleham swerved outwards and swept in a broad arc right away from the course. But Aird was deaf and blind by then. He couldn't do it. And the 34 couldn't stand it. Nothing can stand being wrenched round a hairpin bend at seven miles a minute. She crumpled up and dropped into the sea like a jack-knife snapping shut in the freight.

Laleham was away out to sea, swooning and rising. When he saw the column of water shoot upwards

No claims will be admitted after the Goods have left the Godowns, and all Goods remaining undelivered after the 10th July, 1933, will be subject to rent.

All claims against the steamer must be presented to the Underwriter on or before the 24th July, 1933, or they will not be recognized.

All broken, chafed and damaged Goods are to be left in the Godowns, where they will be examined on the 10th July, 1933, at 10 a.m., by Messrs. Goddard & Douglas.

To comply with the General Bonded Warehouse Regulations consignees must have a Revenue Officer in attendance when damaged dutiable goods are examined.

No Fire Insurance has been effected. Bills of Lading will be countersigned by GIBB, LIVINGSTON & CO., LTD. Agents. Hong Kong, 3rd July, 1933.

he let his engine out to a droning whine again and came towards it, climbing still. The sky was red behind him. The sea was leaden. The 36 wheeled over the Owers Lightship and then went into a nose dive.

Just for a fraction of a second Evans wondered what Laleham was after. He couldn't think he could flatten out a Schneider plane and stall her, just as if she were a demonstration Moth. It couldn't be done. And then he noticed that her engine was still running full.

Evans doesn't think Laleham had worked it out beforehand—he thinks he only realised he couldn't go back when he saw the column of spray that told him he had been right about Aird's cornering; that it was just on the spur of the moment that he nose-dived after Aird like a gannet, with his throttle wide open.

I think myself that he had come to want nothing else; in the world but to prove Aird wrong, to be sure that the 34 would be dredged up with its joints dislocated by the indage of a rank bad turn, and that he never meant to go back after luring him into that suicidal six-and-a-half-mile-a-minute, acute-angled wrench.

He must have known that if you try pistols for two in 1932 there can't be breakfast for even one.

But, whatever was in Laleham's mind when he made that plunge, Evans says he was left standing alone on Selsey beach in the grey of the morning with nothing to assure him that what he had seen was true but two patches of churned-up water.

SAVING IN IMPERIAL ESTIMATES

Arms Cost Refunded To Indian Revenues.

DECREASE DUE TO IRISH
REDUCTION

London.
An interesting item in the Diplomatic and Consular Services estimates which have now been issued is a £21,000 refund to Indian Revenues in respect of arms supplied to the Hedjaz and Nejd, now officially called Saudi Arabia.
Arms and ammunition to the value of £31,500 were supplied in 1929, from stocks in the hands of the Government of India, at the urgent request of the King of the Hedjaz and Nejd (King Ibn Saud) to enable him to suppress rebellion in the portion of his dominions bordering on Iraq and Kuwait.
As the King has not yet been able to repay the cost of the supplies, provision is made for the repayment to the Government of India of two-thirds of the sum involved.

The Total Decrease
Details of the Foreign and Imperial estimates show the following totals:

Foreign and Imperial, $6,328,481 (Total), $1,533,784 (Decrease).
Central Government and Finance, $2,000,464 (Total), $31,020 (Increase).
The decrease in the Foreign and Imperial estimates is principally due to the reduction of £1,102,508 for Irish Free State Services. This reduction is due to the fact that the estimates for the past year were increased by £1,268,010 owing to the omission of receipts from the Irish Free State.

Foreign Office Needs More
The Foreign Office requires an additional £21,801, and of this £18,500 is needed to meet the extra cost of holding the World Economic Conference in London instead of Geneva. This agreement had been reached by the Government with the League of Nations. The expenditure will be incurred by the Office of Works and the Stationary Office as well as the Foreign Office. A total of £6,000 in passport fees, which are estimated to bring in £30,000, more than wipes out savings of £3,201.

The general consular service costs £717,176, services in China £128,967, and services in Japan and Siam £54,315.

What the League Costs Us.
The sum of £164,900 required for the contribution towards the League of Nations and other expenses is a reduction of £17,100. The contribution amounts to £138,000, a reduction of £4,600, while travelling and incidental expenses have been reduced from £37,400 to £24,900 a decline of £12,500. The sum allocated to the British Delegation at the Central Disarmament Conference is £12,500 against £28,000, but other travelling and incidental expenses have risen from £4,000 to £7,000.

The cost to the Dominions Office of the Empire Market Board has been reduced from £45,000 to £30,000. The cost is met by repayment from the Empire Marketing Fund, and therefore makes no difference to the Dominions Office estimate.
With the disappearance of £12,000 for the cost of the Imperial Economic Conference, and savings generally, the Dominions Services estimate has been reduced by £22,161.

While the grant in aid to the Empire Marketing Fund has been reduced by £100,000 to £220,000, the estimated expenditure has been reduced by £161,000. The principal reductions are:
Salaries, wages and allowances £25,000; Grants administered by Government Departments, £63,931; Grants made direct from fund, £87,817, and Empire Marketing Board publicity, £40,270.
In spite of a provision of £88,000 for continuing and liquidation services the total estimated expenditure is only £275,000.

Lower Overseas Settlement
It is principally due to reduced grants that the Overseas Settlement estimate has been decreased by £22,075.

A net decrease of £227,877 in the Colonial and Middle Eastern Services estimate includes a reduction of £92,000 in the grants to British Guiana. Following the change in the status of Iraq, the salaries and expenses of the High Commissioner and his staff, which cost £44,540, have been deleted.

Heads C.P.R. Hotels

H. F. Mathews, General Manager, Canadian Pacific Hotels in Western Canada, with headquarters at Winnipeg, has been promoted to the post of General Manager of the Company's hotel system from coast to coast, with headquarters in Montreal, according to a recent announcement by E. W. Beatty, Chairman and President. Mr. Mathews brings a wide experience gained in 35 years of service with the Company, to his new position.

and also the £40,000 contribution to the Iraq Government to assist in the maintenance of the Iraq army.

The establishment of an Ambassador and staff in Iraq is estimated to cost £21,715.

India Office Increase
An increase of £18,585 in the India Office estimate is due to an advance of £12,585 in salaries and expenses, and the provision of £20,000 against £14,000 for the expenses of Indian representatives attending a Joint Consultation Committee on Indian Constitutional Reforms.

Though there has been a decrease of £32,184 in the grant in aid to the Imperial War Graves Commission, the sum of £300,000, an increase of £200,000 is provided for the Endowment Fund, and this is responsible for the advance of £167,843.

M. P.'s Travelling Expenses
Though the cost of civil custodians at the House of Lords shows an increase of £1,854, there is a saving in the cost of the police of £5,602. As retired allowances have been reduced by £1,252, there is a net decrease on the estimate of £5,361.

The travelling expenses of the members of the House of Commons have been reduced by £3,500, while the police and miscellaneous expenses have come down by £3,223. There are several small increases and the fees on bills and costs are expected to be £2,000 less, so that is only a net increase of £3,882.—Reuter.

WHY THE NATIONS HAVE MET.

Some see no evil anywhere save in high tariffs, though they are in fact a symptom rather than a cause.

America is said to be going to propose an all-round reduction of tariffs. But her tariff wall is so high already that she could make reductions without sensibly diminishing its exclusive power.

Others, with better reason, blame War Debts. Since America insists on payment in gold, refusing goods, they have resulted in a large part of the world's stocks of gold lying idle in her vaults instead of serving as the medium of trade.

Some countries, notably France, will no doubt advocate a general return to the gold standard. But they will be opposed by the countries known as "Sterlingaria" which followed Great Britain off gold and believe that they have benefited by doing so.

It will be seen that the Conference must range the whole field of economics. It is not, by reason of the stipulations made by America, going to have War Debts officially on its agenda, but everyone knows that they must be present in the minds of all the delegates and must play an important part in private conversations.

But, even without this, the agenda paper stretches wide enough. It includes tariffs and all such analogous measures as quotas, embargoes, and special subsidies.

It includes monetary questions, the problem of the gold standard, and the provision of a universally accepted currency.

It includes the problem of raising the price level of primary products.

It includes the problem of facilitating the movement of capital so that it can be employed for development where it is needed.

The Conference has, in fact, to make up its mind on a thousand points of economics on which the professors have been divided ever since the science was invented. If it could do this it would for the first time have set a deliberate opposition to the cycle of boom and slump which hitherto we have been inclined to regard as something in the ordinary course of nature. Whatever else is to be said, it is certain that the Geological Museum at South Kensington is to be the scene of a unique experiment.

The Italian, Swiss and Austrian delegates supported the Rumanian proposal. On the vote, the British proposal was approved by 25 to 15, with one abstention. There were several absentees. The Chairman of the Committee, Guido Jung, of Italy, said that he would report the result of the debate to the Bureau.—British Wireless Service.

Bureau Meets On Monday.

A COMPLETE REVIEW.
London, To-day.

The decision of the Bureau of the World Economic Conference to proceed with the work to the utmost possible extent, necessitates a complete review of the Conference activities. The situation will be clarified when, on Monday, the Bureau has before it reports from the various sub-committees, several of which were in session during yesterday.

Meanwhile, the position was considered at private meetings of the various delegations and there were consultations between the delegates at which the major issues before the Conference were discussed.

The President, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, who took a prominent part in these consultations, presided over a meeting of the British Cabinet held at the House of Commons yesterday.—British Wireless Service.

CIDER TO QUENCH INN FIRE.

200 Gallons Used When Water Fails.

Vienna. Two hundred gallons of cider were used by firemen to put out a fire at an inn at Troetsch, Upper Austria, when the water supply failed.

The outbuildings had been destroyed causing damage of about £500 and the roof of the inn was blazing when the firemen thought of the cider. Barrel after barrel was broken open and the contents were thrown on the flames and finally the inn was saved.—Reuter.

CRAWFORD CHAMPION

R. Nunoi and Jiro Satoh, the Japanese pair who eliminated Hughes and Perry, are in the Final Round of the Men's Doubles.

Yesterday they beat Von Cramm and D. Nourney in four sets, giving another exhibition of convincing modern doubles play. They bombarded the German pair with piercing drives and improved as the match lengthened.

They will meet Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon, holders, in the Final to-day.

Mme Mathieu and Elizabeth Ryan, who won the French Championship at Auteuil recently, are in the Final of the Mixed Doubles.

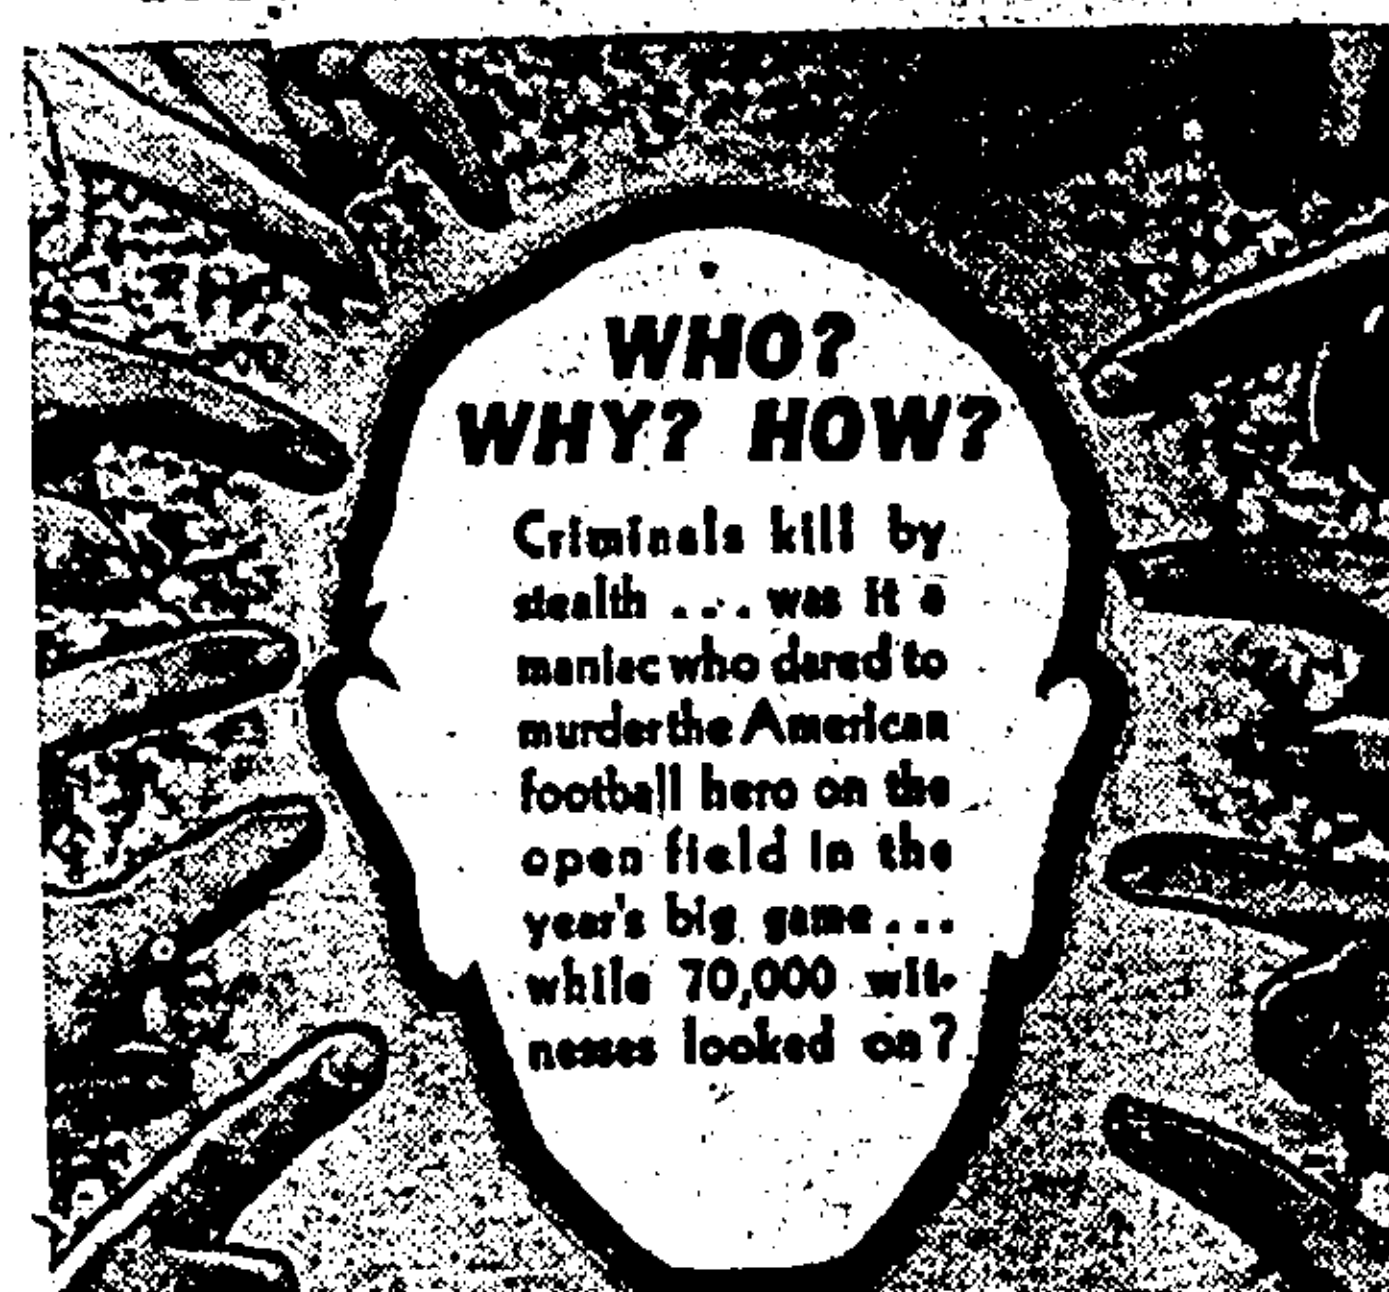

The Franco-American partnership eliminated Mrs. Pittman and Joan Ridley, the "giant-killers" in a match that went the full distance.

One of the hardest struggles of the day was seen when Norman Farquharson and Mary Heeley beat Jean Borotra and Betty Nuthall by scores of 8-6, 11-9, after having beaten R. Miki and Dorothy Round by 10-8, 6-3, earlier in the day. The Anglo-South African pair will meet Von Cramm and Fraulein Krahwinkel in the Final.
